BIG MISTAKE IN GRADING CHILDREN

Should be Rated by Mental Tests Instead of Age, Dr. Thayer of Napanoch Tells Women's Clubs—Describes Various Tests.

On Monday afternoon the Monday Club met at the home of Mrs. A. V. V. Kenyon on Fair street, having as its guests, the members of the Atharhacton Club, and as the speaker for the afternoon, Dr. Thayer of the Napanoch Institution for Mental Defectives, who spoke on the subject, "Tests of General Intelligence." Dr. Thayer has a personality of rare charm that should win the confidence of all who come in touch with him, at the new institution at Napanoch, the only one of its kind.

Dr. Thayer described both the Simon-Binet tests of mentality, and the American revision known as the Stanford Revision, and told of the tests taken, for the first time during the World War, in order to get the most efficient service from the men. Then he described what is known as the Pantomime tests, used for those of foreign birth or immediate inheritance. Later he made very clear the difference between mental defectiveness and insanity which is a disease of the mind. A mental defective can never be cured, but with proper training may learn to do many things.

Socially, Dr. Thayer considered truancy the kindergarten of crime, and then went on to explain why a boy or girl became a truant, usually because they could not keep up with their classmates in school and so would run away from an impossible condition, just as we would. He believed that we were making a big mistake to grade our school children according to age, instead of by mental tests, and made his reasons for so thinking very plain. While the paper was in a sense technical, it was made exceedingly plain and remarkably interesting to all who heard it. Next week the Monday Club will meet with Mrs. Kenyon.

SPANISH PRISONER SWINDLE BOBS UP

Eltinge and Others Offered Chance For Fortune.

If William S. Eltinge, druggist in the Kingston Opera House building, 34 John street, is willing to "take a chance" he might be $100,000 richer than he is. Mr. Eltinge was the recipient today of a letter from Madrid, Spain, as were also others in which the writer states, "Being myself into prison in this city owing to bankruptcy I should desire to know if you would be disposed to aid me in the recovery of $300,000 in banknotes that I have into a trunk who is deposited in a railway station in France." The writer then states to Mr. Eltinge that it would be necessary for him to go to Spain to pay the tribunal the expenses of the writers lawsuit "in order that you may hold some papers of mine hidden in a secret pocket of a hand valise forming part of my baggage kept under seizure. Your reward would be the third part of the amount." A reply is asked by cablegram." The letter closes with this caution: "The utmost reserve and discretion are required. Above all please wire. Do not send letter."

Similar letters have been received in Kingston and other places from time to time during the past ten years. Mr. Eltinge says that while $100,000 in banknotes would be a welcome addition to his cash capital, he will not send the cablegram requested, the text of which is part of the letter and written in Spanish.

BOUTON'S BILL CALLS FOR SCHOHARIE BRIDGE

Senator Bouton has introduced a bill to provide for the building of a bridge across the Schoharie creek at Prattsville. 25 per cent of the cost to be paid by Greene county, 10 per cent by the town of Prattsville and the remainder to be paid by the state. The estimated cost of the bridge is $45,000 and the bill carries an appropriation of $29,250 for the state's share.

Injured Woman Conveyed Here.

Miss Anna Bruck, employed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hiltebrandt of Partition street, Saugerties, who fell on an icy sidewalk last week and suffered an injury to her hip, requiring the attention of Dr. Emerick of Saugerties, was removed to the home of her sister in this city Saturday afternoon in the Grogan ambulance.

White's Case Adjourned.

Addison White, arrested Monday on complaint of his wife of No. 60 Cedar street, charging her husband with non-support, was adjourned to Friday in police court today. Bail was fixed at $300, but White was unable to furnish it and was remanded to jail. He has been working on the dam at Rifton.

New York, Feb. 20.—President Harding has accepted the resignation of Governor E. Mont Reily, of Porto Rico, effective April 1, it was announced officially at the White House this afternoon.

ST. STEPHEN'S TAKES LATIN FROM ENTRANCE NEEDS

In order to encourage the study of classics, St. Stephen's College at Annandale has announced that it has abolished the requirement of Latin for entrance. The college, which has always been strongly in favor of the study of Latin and Greek, has insisted for sixty years on the humanities as a basis for its degree.

In a statement accompanying the announcement officials of the college said that they find many men who take what are known as scientific courses in high school who realize, when it is time for them to enter college, that they have made a mistake and that they wish to follow a liberal arts curriculum. Because they have taken none of the ancient languages in their high school years they are debarred ordinarily from the pursuit of the liberal arts. However, all students entering St. Stephen's must take an intensive course in Latin after they have entered.

GIRL PREACHER AT SALVATION ARMY HALL, FRIDAY NIGHT

Captain Ivy Wild of Brooklyn, N. Y., will speak at the Salvation Army Citadel on North Front street Friday night at eight o'clock. The captan, who is a niece of Captain Ernest Newton of the local corps, will speak on "Who is Your God?"

Lieutenant Emma Grace and Lieutenant J. Fellows of Brooklyn and Pittsburgh, Pa., will assist in this meeting.

Captain Newton, officer in charge of local work, extends to the public a warm welcome.

On Saturday and Sunday Col. John Margett will conduct services. Announcement of these special meetings will be made later.

RAILWAY FIREMAN'S BACK BELIEVED BROKEN BY FALL

J. H. Riley, a Central New England Railroad fireman, is lying at Mansion Square General Hospital in Poughkeepsie, suffering, it is feared, from a broken back as a result of a fall while alighting from the cab of a locomotive at Stissing Sunday afternoon. He is paralyzed from the waist down. The attending physician said it would be impossible to determine the full extent of his injuries until a further examination is made.

Riley was the victim of a peculiar mishap. His foot struck a piece of coal lying by the tracks, and he slipped, falling heavily on his back against one of the rails. A special train carried him to Poughkeepsie.

KINGSTON FIRE FUND ASSOCIATION MET MONDAY.

And Divided Annual Insurance Money Among Fire Companies.

The annual meeting of the Kingston Fire Fund Association was held Monday evening at the city hall and was attended by a representative from each of the volunteer fire companies of the city. MASONIC CLUB LEASES QUARTERS

Ronkin Club Changes Name and, When They are Remodeled, Will Occupy Two Upper Floors of Measter Building on Broadway.

The Masonic Club of Kingston on Monday afternoon signed a lease for the entire two upper floors of the Measter building at No. 635 Broadway, near Henry street, and the rooms will be entirely remodeled and renovated with new electric wiring and lighting installed. When alterations are completed the club will have a large ball room, a pool and billiard room, smoking room, reading room, game room, and parlors. It is expected that the rooms will be ready by March 15.

For several years members of the Masonic bodies of Kingston have been considering the idea of developing the social side of Masonry, and as a result the Ronkin Club came into existence last year. The name "Ronkin" is taken from the names of Rondout Lodge and Kingston Lodge.

At an important meeting of the members of the club Saturday evening it was decided to change the name of the club from Ronkin to the Masonic Club, as it will now be known. The club membership is open to any Master Mason in good standing and the membership today is made up of members of Rondout Lodge and Kingston Lodge.

Since its formation the club has been looking for a place to hold its meetings and which afforded social facilities. This the club believes it has secured in leasing the upper floors of the Measter building. While the alterations will not be completed before March 15, the club has arranged to have some of the rooms open each Friday evening until the entire two floors are ready.

The officers of the Masonic Club are: President, Pearl H. Carey; recording secretary, Harry S. Watts; financial secretary, William C. Coutant; trustees, Sam Messinger, Charles Lewis and M. Edgar Powley.

With the opening of the new club rooms with its new equipment it is expected that the membership of the club will greatly increase.

The meetings of the Masonic Club will not conflict in any way with the regular sessions of Kingston Lodge, No. 10, or Rondout Lodge, No. 343, as the club is organized for social purposes only and to give its members a place in which they can drop in and meet their friends.

ICY SIDEWALKS SHOULD BE COVERED OVER WITH ASHES

Street Department Still Busy Removing Snow From Streets.

The street department is still busy removing snow from the city streets. There are a number of walks covered with ice about the city and householders should see to it that the ice is covered over with ashes or other material to prevent pedestrains from slipping and falling. Kingston's snow removal bill this winter will be exceptionally large due to the heavy fall of snow during January.

Reds Sign Saugerties Pitcher.

Harry E. Mulford, son of C. Leslie Mulford of Partition street, Saugerties, has been signed by Garry Herrmann, owner of the Cincinnati Nationals for a tryout as pitcher. He will accompany the Reds on their spring training trip to Orlando, Florida. Mr. Mulford is well known in baseball circles around here, having pitched for the Saugerties team a number of years ago.

Injured Playing "Wild West."

Kenneth, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. George Dixon of West Bridge street, Saugerties, while in play with Russel O'Dea in a wild west game last Friday was accidentally stabbed. The open knife O'Dea held in his hand penetrated the young boy's right breast, making an ugly wound. Dr. Diedling of Saugerties dressed the injury.

CITIZENS' MILITARY CLUB IS FORMED

To Foster Volunteer Training Camp Spirit Here—Dr. Kaplan Echoes Prayer for Lasting Peace But If it Is Impossible Hopes for Something Besides Raw Recruits.

A Citizens' Military Club was organized Monday night at the armory. Dr. Samuel Stern, who is the civilian representative of the government in this city, was asked to take the chair and organize the club as Kingston's unit in the government plan of forming citizens' military training camps. The chairman expressed the hope that the young men of Kingston who will volunteer to go to these camps for one month's military training, will keep up the fine reputation which the Kingston boys made for themselves at Camp Dix.

Lieutenant Dr. Bernard M. Kaplan, Chaplain O. R. C., after conveying the greetings from Major Burdett Kelly, who was unavoidably absent, addressed the club as follows:

"We are all, to some extent, hero worshippers. When I was a boy in New York, my hero was Nathan Hale. I thought that there never would be a hero like him. In the World War, however, we had scores of Nathan Hales in our brave army.

"Marvelous as their patriotism and heroism were, still greater would have been their achievements and at less sacrifice, had we been prepared for the emergency. The lesson the World War taught us is to be prepared. We shall never forget that lesson.

"Splendid as our army is, it is altogether too small. The government has devised the wise plan to form citizens' military units all over the country. Aided by public spirited civilians, the government is enabled to attract some of the finest young men who are willing to devote one month a year to military training, enjoying at the some time at the government's expense a healthful vacation and the many advantages which go with military training. I congratulate you on the privilege of being able to join one of these clubs. I hope that President Harding's prayer for lasting peace may be fulfilled, but should our country's flag ever have an occasion to call us, we shall respond not as raw recruits, but as one hundred per cent Americans, duly prepared and well qualified."

The club will meet every first and third Monday at the armory. It was announced that Col. George F. Chandler has kindly consented to address the Citizens' Military Club in the near future.

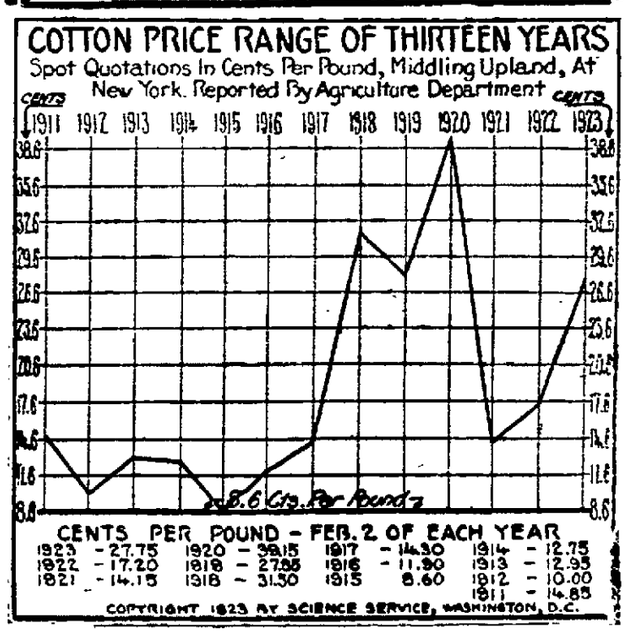
BUSINESS DAY by DAY as the Government sees it

PREPARED BY RALPH F. COUCH



B. P. W. TRANSACTS LITTLE BUSINESS

New and Modern City Lighting Plan to be Presented in Two Weeks—Routine Matters.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Public Works held Monday evening in its rooms at the city hall all the members were present with the exception of John Hiltebrant, who is on a month's vacation. The meeting was called to order at 7:45 o'clock.

An application was first read, wherein Morris Hymes, the North Front street shoe dealer, applied for permission to erect an electric sign to be hung in front of his store. Permission was granted.

Correspondence was read from Leon Chambers applying for permission to have a large canvas sign strung in front of the New York State armory advertising the automobile show. Permission was granted.

A number of applications were then read to have gas service in homes on North Manor avenue and Railroad avenue. Matter was referred to the street superintendent and the street committee.

A communication from the Automobile Club of Ulster county was heard. The letter urged the board to take action in having the safety first plan adopted, whereby the trolley cars would be permitted to admit and discharge passengers on the right side. Matter was directed to the special committee, Matthews and Hiltebrant.

Matters that were referred to the board from the last common council meeting, relative to cleaning sidewalks in different sections of this city, were also handed over to the street superintendent and the street committee for consideration.

Messrs. Lasher, Ackert and Nightingale of the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Company were present and discussed plans for the installation of the proposed new lighting system. With no intention of immediate action, the hearing resulted in a round table discussion and more details as to the gas company's proposals.

It was finally decided that the company's representatives come prepared at a special meeting to be held in two weeks' time with their prices and to have a map of the city, on which they should mark where the lights would be located. It was also suggested that before a new plan was adopted, the common council be called in session to have them look over the plans. An agreement would then be sought by which no more lights would be installed during the term of the ensuing contract unless on new streets or in cases of emergency.

The board concluded the evening with an executive session of twenty minutes from which reporters were, of course, excluded.

SCARAB OF 1200 B. C. IN WALL ST. WINDOW.

A genuine Egyptian Scarab with a registered certificate of antiquity is on exhibition in one of the show windows of Safford & Scudder on Wall street, being loaned by Joseph Reynolds of 171 Main street. It is a conventional sized representation of a beetle being of stone, brown in color. It is, according to the certificate, of Dynasty XIX, date B. C. 1200. On the flat underside is an inscription meaning "The name of the Great Solar Divinity, Amen-Ra." The Scarab was obtained about three years ago by a sister-in-law of Mr. Reynolds while she was living in Cairo, Egypt., and its antiquity is guaranteed by a dealer there whose place is known as "Shaira Kamel."

COE IS ON SNOW REMOVAL COMMITTEE.

Chosen to Consult With Commissioner Greene.

Louis S. Coe, secretary of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce, is one of a committee named at the Utica conference of secretaries last week, to urge State Highway Commissioner Frederick Stuart Greene that some provision be made to keep the main highways open in the winter. The commission called upon Commissioner Greene at Albany today. Other members are Roy S. Smith, Albany; G. Wray Lemon, Troy; James E. Canfield, Saratoga.

"PUSSYFOOT" AT RONDOUT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH TONIGHT

Incalcaterra, vice president and treasurer, Miss Natalie S. DeWitt, secretary, Miss Gladys Castor.

SMITH MUST SIGN PETITION TO CONGRESS TO MODIFY VOLSTEAD LAW

Republicans Amend Walker-Donohue Resolution In Assembly So He Will Share In Credit or Blame—"I Will," He Says.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Feb. 20.—An attempt by the Democrats to restore the Walker-Donhue resolution, memorializing congress to modify the Volstead law to permit the sale of light wines and beer, to its original form, was defeated in the assembly by a vote of 76 to 63 early this afternoon.

Albany, Feb. 20.—"If the Republican leaders of the legislature haven't got nerve enough to do it themselves, I will do it for them. I never yet recommended anything that I wasn't ready to pass along." This was the declaration of Governor Smith today when informed the Walker-Donohue resolution, which he recommended, memorializing congress to modify the Volstead law to permit the sale of light wine and beer, had been amended by the assembly judiciary committee so that the governor will have to sign it and send it to every representative in congress.

The resolution is expected to pass it in the assembly later in the day. Dry Republicans have been preparing for weeks to attack it.

The Republicans attacked the resolution as "nothing but bunk." The Democrats charged the amendments made by the Republicans was "cheap politics."

FIVE KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

Fast Lehigh Valley Mail Train Crashes Into Rear End of Freight Train—Crews Suffer.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Sayre, Pa., Feb. 20.—Five men were killed and one fatally injured at five o'clock this morning when No. 17, fast mail train of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, crashed into the rear of a freight train at Rummerfield, 27 miles east of this place.

The dead:

William Schollenberger, of Easton, Pa., engineer of No. 17.

O. W. McDaniels, of Athens, trainman on the mail train.

O. L. Culber, of Sayre, engineer of the freight.

George Kasper, of Sayre, fireman on the freight.

John Nodolin, of Easton, fireman of Engine No. 1147, which was being towed by the freight.

Joseph Fox, of Sayre, fireman on the mail train.

Kasper was not instantly killed but died while he was being taken to a local hospital.

Allan Wood, a member of the board of governors of the New York State Association of Chiefs of Police, and the other members of the board met in Poughkeepsie Monday afternoon to arrange for the annual convention of the association which will be held in that city on August 28, 29 and 30.

Hooch Tank in Wall.

Only after the most minute examination by the Newburgh authorities during a raid on the restaurant of Rocco Guiglietta at 262 Washington street, Newburgh, Saturday night, did they discover a quantity of alleged whiskey and gin. The "hooch" was tapped from a tank which was most cleverly and cunningly set in a concrete wall. At the time of the raid on Saturday night, Philip Donagolo, 36, Italian, single, cook, was in charge of the restaurant.

UPSTATE GETS A LITTLE COAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Glens Falls, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Arrival of coal in pinched communities furnished relief that prevented seizures by force this morning. Clarence B. Kilmer, local fuel administrator, was optimistic about the outlook when notified the first thing this morning that ten cars had reached Saratoga, where nine were seized yesterday, three were received at Fort Edward where officials were prepared to make seizures today if no coal was received by the local dealer, and one car was received at Whitehall, where seizures are also imminent.

Seizures in Fort Edward and Whitehall would have been authorized this morning had no coal been received by dealers.

Four cars were received in Glens Falls, three in Hudson Falls, and one at Lake George.

In addition to these cars that arrived today, more are due in each of these places today, Mr. Kilmer said.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Distribution of the nine cars of coal seized here by Dr. Arthur J. Leonard, commissioner of public safety, is being carried out today under supervision of the police.

WOULD INCREASE PAY OF COURT LIBRARIAN

Senator Bouton has introduced a bill to increase the salary of the supreme court librarian in this city to $1,500 a year. The pay is now $600 a year.

HARDING AND HUGHES SILENT ABOUT RUHR

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Feb. 20.—The determination of President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes to abstain from any action at this time, which might be construed as "intervention" in the Ruhr situation, was re-emphasized today in the wake of yesterday's discussion of American policy in the British parliament.

Intimations during the debate that "informal conversations," have been going on between Washington and London concerning the possibilities of joint British-American action utterly failed of confirmation today.

WORK COMPLETED AT MAIN P. O.

The public is invited to inspect the improvements just completed at the main post office building, Broadway and Prince street. Part of the lobby on the Prince street side has been enclosed by swinging the boxes across the lobby, making an additional office space of 15x14 feet, and relieving the workroom of all bookkeeping, payroll and correspondence work formerly done in a corner of the main workroom. This change permits a large, light and airy space for the four rural delivery carriers which is much appreciated. The stamp and general delivery division is much enlarged as is also the registry and parcel post division. These were very cramped quarters, this part of the business having doubled the past few years. The woodwork of the additional office space matches the oak of the lobby while the woodwork in the workroom is similar to the Georgia pine of that room

The improvements were carried out by George E. Wright, Inc., Chicago, C. E. Kellogg, representative, assisted by Augustus Kohler of this city. Superintendent of Construction Brooks of the treasury department of Worcester, Mass., inspected and aproved the job on Monday.

Postmaster DeWitt and the employes at the main office are well pleased with the alterations and take pleasure in showing patrons through the building.

Feeding Russian Children.

The Soviet government and the American Relief Administration estimates as to the number of children who will need to be fed from now until the next harvest are in accord; both agree that the maximum number of children who will have to be fed in the areas the A. R. A. is able to reach is 3,000,000 if starvation is to be prevented, according to a cable from C. J. C. Quinn to the New York headquarters of the A. R. A. Mr. Quinn is the acting director of the Russian unit.

THINK TOMB OF TUT TEMPORARY

French Egyptologists Believe Mummy and Effects Were Put in Place Where Found Until More Fitting Sepulchre Could Be Prepared.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, Feb. 20.—Professor Benedite, curator of the Luxembourg Museum and one of the foremost Egyptologists in France, declared his belief today Lord Carnarvon's discovery near Luxor is not the authentic tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, but a temporary refuge, where the mummy was secreted by friends to prevent the ancient pharaoh's bitter enemy and usurper, King Armais, from finding and despoiling the grave.

Prof. Benedite's opinion was supported by another French Egyptologist, Professor Georges Reneple, curator of the Egyptian department of the Louvre Museum. Both have been following the Luxor discoveries with intense interest and admit the finding of the art objects more than 3,000 years old, marks an epic in Egyptian discoveries.

"The explorer, Dr Davis, in 1912, found King Armais's tomb, but the wall decorations and inscriptions on the sarcophagus were proved to have been intended originally for Tut-Ankh-Amen," said Prof. Benedite. "We do not know who removed Tut-Ankh-Amen's body and installed the mummy of Armais

"I am certain that the tomb found by Lord Carnarvon is not the royal sepulchre. The tombs of Rameses III, Rameses IX, Meneptah and Seti I, are much more luxurious and larger. It was necessary to cross four, five and even six hallways before arriving at the inner shrine containing the sarcophagus with the mummy.

"In comparison with these, the Luxor discovery is revealed as a poor tomb not at all corresponding in splendor to others constructed in the reign of Tut-Ankh-Amen.

"The brilliant splendors found near Lexor, it must be remembered, consisted of portable objects such as jewels, marvellously wrought furniture art works and so on, which could easily be carried. They are said to surpass anything found elsewhere in Egypt. There is an evident discrepancy between the richness of the objects and the poorness of the mural decorations in this tomb in the Valley of the Kings.

"There are two other hypotheses' Tut-Ankh-Amen's mummy may have been removed from the tomb by Armais, or, Tut-Ankh-Amen's body may have been placed in the cave-like cavity where it was found, while his real tomb was being built and later forgotten."

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

Comfort and Service Combined in a One Piece House Frock With Knickers.

THE MISTAKE

By JANE GORDON

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

Old Hanley made no friends. His absorbing passion was his only grandchild. But his was an unreasoning, jealous affection, which brought to the girl no happiness. Being a modern young woman, Diana grieved not, but doing her duty fairly by the old man, still fought determinedly for her rightful freedom. So peace did not always reign beneath the roof of the great house that was her grandfather's.

The issue now at hand was Diana's announcement of her engagement. And the suitor in question was not approved, because no suitor could be approved, in her grandfather's selfish plan, which was that the young woman's devotion be given to himself wholly—during the remainder of his solitary years. This, he insisted, was but part of the debt she owed.

How Diana had managed to meet her lover, old Hanley, inwardly fuming, could not know. Diana had met Barry Gale while on a visit to a school chum. Barry was a decent young chap, honestly in love, and honestly striving to make a place for himself in the world of business. Because his years were young he had not advanced far—there must needs be some patient waiting upon the part of the engaged couple.

"Unless you give up this young man during the year to come, every cent of my money shall go to another young woman." His tongue was sarcastic.

"But Jared"—this was Diana's affectionately disrespectful title for her grandfather—"Jared where will you find the young woman to take my place? As I understand your will, the heir is to have this property only on condition of living on in the old house and 'supporting it in the style to which it has been accustomed.' Of course you will leave money enough for that—but what young woman may carry on the home of our fathers?"

Old Hanley's eyes glittered; meaningly he pressed a button on his desk. Immediately the door opened and a young woman entered the office room. She was a quiet appearing young woman, unlike Diana's vibrant personality.

"Miss Rhoda Brent," the old man introduced, "my granddaughter, Miss Diana Curwood."

Silently the girls regarded each other.

To Diana, standing there in her crimson sweater, it seemed that one of the old-time pictures from the hall had given up its subject. Surely Miss Rhoda, with her shy sweet smile, her quaint pretty manner, was not a spirit of present times.

"Miss Brent," Jared Hanley explained, "is my new secretary. Mullins, my lawyer, recommended her. She has been recently left alone in her country home and Mullins was a friend of her father."

When Miss Brent was dismissed the old man turned to his granddaughter—"That," he said quietly, "is the young woman to whom my property and fortune will be bequeathed if you prefer to forfeit it. Miss Brent will read to me as I desire, or perform those small social services which my granddaughter should but does not find pleasure in rendering. If she proves faithful in undivided attention she, and not you, will reap the reward."

That Rhoda Brent proved faithful in her tasks was not to be disputed. Neither did Diana relent in her devotion to her earnest young lover.

Barry was sad at the sacrifice which his beloved must make for his sake, and Diana, good naturedly indifferent, was kindly companionable with her acrid grandfather. Rhoda walked often with the disapproved girl through the gardens.

"It is so comforting," Diana once said, "to have a trusted woman confidante in my home. You cannot know how comforting, Rhoda." And the secretary, freed from duty in the late hours of the evening, would sit in her bedroom sewing things fine and filmy for Diana's trousseau.

So the year passed. And Barry Gale came to his desired goal. He might dare to marry Diana now.

It was Rhoda who suggested a way out. Her little vacant home in the country town would be of easy access to the city, she offered; with a very few new furnishings it might be made inviting.

The old man, when he heard the surprising arrangement, sat for a time staring at the happy young faces before him. Diana's threatened usurper and Diana herself, had turned the tables of his spite into loving friendliness. He made one last effort at vengeance.

"So," he said, "you two will change places. Diana of Hanley estate, in the Brent's humble cottage. Rhoda Brent, mistress and owner, here."

But Rhoda's soft voice was raised to dispute him. "That could never be," she said. "Diana's happy presence alone has made my staying here possible. I could not remain if she goes." To the old man alone, she added, "And her presence here alone can make your happiness. Give your granddaughter welcome, and her young husband, who shall be a strength to you. And if you still wish me to stay on then, as your secretary—" Which was at last the arrangement. And because Jared had learned that love is stronger than power, they all lived happily together ever after—that is, until Rhoda found her own greater love—which is another story.

Millions of wishes created this record

EVERY time a phonograph record has been played these past twenty years—ever since the first disc record—some one has wished that surface sound might be abolished.

Millions and millions of times it has been wished—by people with sensitive nerves, who hear the noise of needle friction above everything — by keen-eared music lovers listening for delicate phrasing and expression, which they know to be there, but which are drowned in the blur of surface sounds.

Those millions of wishes have at last come true in the form of Columbia New Process Records. Columbia engineers and chemists solved the problem by the discovery of a new surface substance so fine and smooth that the needle travels over it almost inaudibly.

All of the Columbia Records out to-day are made with this amazingly quiet, new surface.

Tear out this list and take it to a Columbia Dealer. He will play any or all that you request. Note the fullness and sweetness of tone, a finer musical quality than you ever heard before. Note the absence of any annoying surface distraction.

As an example of this wonderful new construction and superior musical charm ask to hear A-3790. It's Ted Lewis and His Band playing "Runnin' Wild"—a fox-trot that will keep you dancing till it's time to bring in the milk. Its teammate on the other side is "St. Louis Blues."

Only in Columbia New Process Records can you obtain this perfection of surface quietness. The process is patented.

Mrs. Frank J. Campbell has been sick the past week.

Miss Ellen Ter Bush entertained a number of friends at her home on Maple avenue last Thursday evening.

Average Jones

Big Print

By SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS

In the Cosmic club Mr. Algernon Spofford was a figure of distinction. Amidst the varied, curious, eccentric, brilliant, and even slightly unbalanced minds which made the organization unique, his was the only wholly solid and stupid one. Hence it was with misgiving that the Ad-Visor opened the door of his sanctum to Mr. Spofford, on a harsh December noon. But the misgivings were supplanted by pleased surprise when the caller laid in his hand a clipping from a small country-town paper, to this effect:

RANSOM—LOST LAD FROM HARwick not drowned nor harmed. Retained for ransom. Safe and sound to parents for $50,000. Write, Mortimer Morgan, General Delivery, N. Y. Post Office.

Average Jones looked from the advertisement to the vacuous smile of Mr. Algernon Spofford.

"Algy, who sent this to you?"

"Cousin of mine up in Harwick. I used to visit in Harwick, so they asked me to get you interested in Bailey Prentice's case. He's the lost boy."

"You've done it. Now tell me all you know."

Spofford produced a letter which gave the outlines of the case. Bailey Prentice's disappearance, it was set forth, was the lesser of two simultaneous phenomena which violently jarred the somnolent New England village of Harwick from its wonted calm. The greater was the "Harwick meteor." At ten-fifteen on the night of December 12, the streets being full of people, coming from the moving picture show, there was a startling concussion from the overhanging clouds and the astounded populace saw a ball of flame plunging earthward, to the northwest of the town, and waxing in intensity as it fell. Darkness succeeded. But, within a minute, a lurid radiance rose and spread in the night. The aerial bolt had gone crashing through an old barn on the Tuxall place, setting it afire.

Bailey Prentice was among the very few who did not go to the fire. Taken in connection with the fact that he was fourteen years old and very thoroughly a boy, this, in itself, was phenomenal. In the excitement of the occasion, however, his absence was not noted. But when, on the following morning, Rev. Peter Prentice, going up to call his son, found the boy's room empty and the bed untouched, the second sensation of the day was launched. Bailey Prentice had, quite simply, vanished.

On the afternoon of December 14 a coat and waistcoat were found on the seashore a mile north of the village. Rev. Mr. Peter Prentice identified the clothes as his son's. Searching parties covered the beach for miles, looking for the body. Preparations were made for the funeral services, when a new and astonishing factor was injected into the situation. An advertisement, received by mail from New York, with stamps affixed to the "copy" to pay for its insertion, appeared in the local paper.

"And here's the advertisement," concluded Mr. Algernon Spofford, indicating the slip of paper which he had turned over to Average Jones.

Average Jones took train for Harwick, and within a few hours was rubbing his hands over an open fire in the parsonage, whose stiff and cheerless aspect bespoke the lack of a woman's humanizing touch, for Rev. Mr. Prentice was a widower. Overwrought with anxiety and strain, the haggard clergyman, as soon as he had taken his visitor's coat, began a hurried, inconsequential narrative, broke off, tried again, fell into an inextricable confusion of words, and, dropping his head in his hands, cried:

"I can't tell you. It is all a hopeless jumble."

"Come!" said the younger man encouragingly. "Comfort yourself with the idea that your son is alive, at any rate."

"But how can I be sure, even of that?"

Average Jones glanced at a copy of the advertisement which he held. "I think we can take Mr. Morley's word so far."

"Even so; fifty thousand dollars ransom!" said the minister, and stopped with a groan.

"Nonsense!" said Average Jones heartily. "You can dismiss the advertisement as a blind; the second blind, in fact."

"The second?"

"Certainly. The first was the clothing on the shore. It was put there to create the impression that your son was drowned."

"It seems far-fetched to me," said Rev. Mr. Prentice doubtfully. "Who would have any motive for doing such a thing?"

"That is what we have to find out. What time did your son go to his room the night of his disappearance?"

"Earlier than usual, as I remember. A little before nine o'clock. He wanted to experiment with a new fishing outfit just given him for his birthday."

"I see. Will you take me to his room?"

They mounted to the boy's quarters, which overlooked the roof of the side porch from a window facing north. The charred ruins of a barn about half a mile away were plainly visible through this window.

"The barn which the meteor destroyed," said Rev. Mr. Prentice, pointing it out.

One glance was all that Average Jones bestowed upon a spot which, for a few days, had been of national interest. His concern was inside the room. A stand against the wall was littered with bits of shining mechanism. An unjointed fishing rod lay on the bed. Near at hand were a small screw-driver and a knife with a broken blade.

"Were things in this condition when you came to call Bailey in the morning and found him gone?" asked Average Jones.

"Nothing has been touched," said the clergyman in a low voice.

Average Jones straightened up and stretched himself languidly. His voice when he spoke again took on the slow drawl of boredom. One might have thought that he had lost all interest in the case—but for the thoughtful pucker of the broad forehead which belied his halting accents.

"Then—er—when Bailey left here he hadn't any idea—of—er—running away."

"I don't follow you, Mr. Jones."

"Psychology," said Average Jones. "Elementary psychology. Here's your son's new reel. A normal boy doesn't abandon a brand-new fad when he runs away. It isn't in boy nature. No, he was taking this reel apart to study it when some unexpected occurrence checked him and drew him outside."

"The meteor."

"I made some inquiries in the village on my way up. None of the hundreds of people who turned out for the fire, remembers seeing Bailey about."

"That is true."

"The meteor fell at ten-fifteen. Bailey, it's probable, was out of the house before the meteor fell."

"I should have heard him go out of the front door."

"That is, perhaps, why he went out of the window," observed Average Jones, indicating certain marks on the sill. Swinging his feet over, he stepped upon the roof of the porch, and peered at the ground below.

"And down the lightning rod," he added.

For a moment he stood meditating. "The ground is now frozen hard," he said presently. "Bailey's footprints where he landed are deeply marked. Therefore the soil must have been pretty soft at the time."

"Very," agreed the clergyman. "There had been a three-day downpour, up to the evening of Bailey's disappearance. About nine o'clock the wind shifted to the northeast, and everything froze hard. There has been no thaw since."

"You seem very clear on these points, Mr. Prentice."

"I noted them specially, having in mind to write a paper on the meteorite for the Congregationalist."

"Ah! Perhaps you could tell me, then, how soon after the meteor's fall, the barn yonder was discovered to be afire."

"Almost instantly. It was in full blaze within a very short time after."

"How short? Five minutes or so?"

"Not so much. Certainly not more than two."

"H'm! Peculiar! Ra—a—a—ather peculiar," drawled Average Jones. "Particularly in view of the weather."

"In what respect?"

"In respect to a barn, water-soaked by a three-day rain bursting into flame like tinder."

"It had not occurred to me. But the friction and heat of the meteorite must have been extremely great."

"And extremely momentary except as to the lower floor, and the fire should have taken some time to spread, from that. However, to turn to other matters—" He swung himself over the edge of the roof and went briskly down the lightning rod.

Back in the study, Average Jones sat meditating a few moments. Presently he asked:

"Did you go to the spot where your son's clothes were found?"

"Yes. Some time after."

"Where was it?"

"On the seashore, some half a mile to the east of the Tuxall place, and a little beyond."

"Is there a roadway from the Tuxall place to the spot?"

"No; I believe not. But one could go across the fields and through the barn to the old deserted roadway."

"Ah. There's an old roadway, is there?"

"Yes. It skirts the shore to join Boston pike about three miles up."

"And how far from this roadway were your son's clothes found?"

"Just a few feet."

"H'm. Any tracks in the roadway?"

"Yes. I recall seeing some buggy tracks and being surprised, because no one ever drives that way."

"Then it is conceivable that your son's clothes might have been tossed from the passing vehicle, to the spot where they were discovered."

"Conceivable, certainly. But I can see no ground for such a conjecture."

"How far down the road, in this direction, did the tracks run?"

"Not beyond the fence-bar opening from the Tuxall field, if that is what you mean."

"It is, exactly. Do you know this Tuxall?"

"Hardly at all. He is very jealous of his precious meteor, and guards the ruins of the barn, where it lies, with a shotgun."

"Indeed? He promises to be an interesting study. Meantime, I'd like to look at your son's clothes."

From a closet Mr. Prentice brought out a coat and waistcoat of the "pepper-and-salt" pattern which is sold by the hundreds of thousands the whole country over. These the visitor examined carefully. The coat was caked with mud, particularly thick on one shoulder. He called the minister's attention to it.

"It would be from lying wet on the shore," said Rev. Mr. Prentice.

"Not at all. This is mud, not sand. And it's ground or pressed in. Has anyone tampered with these since they were found?"

"I went through the pockets."

Average Jones frowned. "Find anything?"

"Nothing of importance. A handkerchief, some odds and ends of string—oh, and a paper with some gibberish on it."

"What was the nature of this gibberish?"

"Why, it might have been some sort of boyish secret code, though it was hardly decipherable enough to judge from. I remember some flamboyant adjectives referring to something three feet high. I threw the paper into the waste basket."

Turning that receptacle out on the table, Average Jones discovered in the debris a sheet of cheap, ruled paper, covered with penciled words in print characters. Most of these had been crossed out in favor of other words or sentences, which in turn had been "scratched." Evidently the writer had been toilfully experimenting toward some elegance or emphasis of expression, which persistently eluded him. Amidst the wreck and ruin of rhetoric, however, one phrase stood out clear:

"Stupendous scientific sensation."

Below this was a huddle and smudge of words, from which adjectives darted out like dim flames amidst smoke. "Gigantic" showed in its entirety, followed by an unintelligible erasure. At the end of this line was the legend "3 Feet High." "Veritable Visitor," appeared below, and beyond it, what seemed to be the word "Void." And near the foot of the sheet the student of all this chaos could make out, faintly but unmistakably, "Marvelous Man-l—(the rest of the word being cut off by a broad smear of black) Monster 3 Feet." The remainder was wholly undecipherable.

A Sheet of Ruled Paper, Covered With Penciled Words.

"You—er—threw this in the—er—waste basket," he drawled. "In which pocket was it?"

"The waistcoat. An upper one. I believe. There was a pencil there, too."

"Have you an old pair of shoes of Bailey's?" asked the visitor abruptly.

"Why, I suppose so. In the attic somewhere."

"Please bring them to me."

Rev. Mr. Prentice left the room. No sooner had the door closed after him than Average Jones jumped out of his chair, stripped to his shirt, caught up the pepper-and-salt waistcoat, tried it on, buttoned it across his chest without difficulty; then thrust his arm into the coat which went with it, and wormed his way, effortfully, partly into that. He laid it aside only when he had determined that he could get it no further on. He was clothed and in his right garments when Rev. Mr. Prentice returned with a much-worn pair of shoes.

"Will these do?" he asked.

Average Jones hardly gave them the courtesy of a glance. "Yes," he said indifferently, and set them aside. "Have you a timetable here?"

"You're going to leave?" cried the clergyman, in sharp disappointment.

"In just half an hour," replied the visitor, holding his finger on the time table.

"Mr. Jones, are you giving up the attempt to discover what became of my boy?"

"I know what became of him."

The minister put out a hand and grasped the back of a chair for support. His lips parted. No sound came from them. Average Jones carefully folded the paper of "gibberish" and tucked it away in his card case.

"Bailey has been carried away by two people in a buggy. They were strangers to the town. He was injured and unconscious. They still have him. Incidentally, he has seriously interfered with a daring and highly ingenious enterprise. That is all I can tell you at present."

The clergyman found his voice. "In the name of heaven, Mr. Jones," he cried, "tell me who and what these people are."

"I don't know who they are. I do know what they are. But it can do no good to tell you the one until I can find out the other. Be sure of one thing, Bailey is in no further danger. You'll hear from me as soon as I have anything definite to report."

With that, Rev. Mr. Prentice had to be content; that and a few days later, a sheet of letter paper bearing the business imprint of the Ad-Visor and inclosing this advertisement:

WANTED—3 FT. TYPE FOR SENSATional Bill Work. Show samples. Delivery in two weeks. A. Jones, Ad-Visor, Astor Court Temple, N. Y. City.

As the answers came in to Average Jones, he put them aside, because none of the seekers for business was able to "show samples." Finally there came a letter from Hoke & Hollins of Rose street. They would like Mr. Jones to call and inspect some special type upon which they were then at work. Mr. Jones called. The junior member received him.

"Quite providential, Mr. Jones," he said. "We're turning out some single-letter, hand-made type of just the size you want. Only part of the alphabet, however. Isn't that a fine piece of lettering!"

He held up an enormous M to the admiration of his visitor.

"Excellent!" approved Average Jones. "I'd like to see other letters; A, for example."

Mr. Hollis produced a symmetrical A.

"And now, an R, if you please; and perhaps a Y."

Mr. Hollis looked at his visitor with suspicion. "You appear to be selecting the very letters which I have," he remarked.

"Those which—er—would make up the—er—legend. 'Marvelous Manlike Monster.'" drawled Average Jones.

"Then you know the Farleys," said the print man.

"The Flying Farleys," said Average Jones. "They used to do ascensions with firework trimmings, didn't they? No; I don't exactly know them. But I'd like to."

"That's another matter," retorted Mr. Hollins annoyed at having betrayed himself. "This type is decidedly a private—even a secret—order. I had no right to say anything about it or the customers who ordered it."

"Still, you could see that a letter left here for them reached them, I suppose."

After some hesitation, the other agreed. Average Jones sat down to the composition of an epistle which should be sufficiently imperative without being too alarming. Having completed this delicate task to his satisfaction he handed the result to Mr. Hollins.

"If you haven't already struck off a proof of that line, you might do so," he suggested. "I've asked the Farleys for a print of it; and I fancy they'll be sending for one."

Leaving the shop he went directly to a telegraph office, where he dispatched two messages to Harwick. One to Rev. Peter Prentice. The other was to the local chief of police.

On the following afternoon Mr. Prentice stood trembling in the anteroom of the Ad-Visor's suite. With the briefest word of greeting Average Jones led him into his private office, where a white-faced, clear-eyed boy, with his head swathed in bandages, sat waiting. As the Ad-Visor closed the door after him, he heard the breathless, boyish "Hello, father," merged in the broken cry of Rev. Peter Prentice.

Five minutes he gave father and son. When he returned to the room, carrying a loose roll of reddish paper, he was followed by a strange couple. The woman was plumply muscular. Her attractive face was both defiant and uneasy. Behind her strode a wiry man of forty. His chief claim to notice lay in an outrageously fancy waistcoat, which was ill-matched with his sober, commonplace, "pepper-and-salt" suit.

"Mr. and Mrs. Farley, Rev. Mr. Prentice," said Average Jones in introduction.

"The strangers in the wagon?" asked the clergyman quickly.

"The same," admitted the woman briefly.

Rev. Mr. Prentice turned upon Farley. "Why did you want to steal my boy away?" he demanded.

"Didn't want to. Had to," replied that gentleman succinctly.

"Let's do this in order," suggested Average Jones. "The principal actor's story, first. Speak up, Bailey."

"Don't know my own story," said the boy with a grin. "Only part of it. Mrs. Farley's been awful good to me, takin' care of me an' all that. But she wouldn't tell me how I got hurt or where I was when I woke up."

"Naturally. Well, we must piece it out among us. Now, Bailey, you were working over your reel when you looked out of your window and saw a queer light over at the Tuxall place."

"That's what!" corroborated the boy. "A kind of flame shot up from the ground. Then it spread a little. Then it went out. And there were people running around it."

"Ah! Someone must have got careless with the oil," observed Average Jones.

"That fool Tuxall!" broke in Farley with an oath. "It was him gummed the whole game."

"Mr. Tuxall, I regret to say," remarked Average Jones, "has left for parts unknown, so the Harwick authorities inform me, probably foreseeing a charge of arson."

"Arson?" repeated Rev. Mr. Prentice in astonishment.

"Of course. Only oil and matches could have made a barn flare up, after a three days' rain, as his did. Now, Bailey, to continue. You ran across the fields to the Tuxall place and went around—let me see, the wind had shifted to the northeast—yes; to the northeast of the barn and quite a distance away. There you saw a man at work in his shirt."

"Well—I'll—be—jiggered!" said the boy in measured tones. "Where were you hiding, Mr. Jones?"

"Not behind the tree there, anyway," returned the Ad-Visor with a chuckle. "There is a tree there, I suppose?"

"Yes; and there was something alive tied up in it with a rope."

"Well, not exactly alive," returned Average Jones, "though the mistake is a natural one."

"I tell you, I know," persisted Bailey. "While Mr. and Mrs. Farley were workin' over some kind of a box, I shinned up the tree."

"Bold young adventurer! And what did you find?"

"One of the limbs was shakin' and thrashin'. I crawled out on it. I guess it was kind o' crazy of me, but I was goin' to find out what was. What if I broke my neck. There was a rope tied to it, and some big thing up above pullin' and jerkin' at it, trvin' to get away. Pretty soon, Mr. and Mrs. Farley came almost under me. He says: 'Is Tuxall all ready?' and she says: 'He thinks we ought to wait half an hour. The street'll be full of folks then.' Then he says: 'Well, I hate to risk it, but maybe it's better.' Just then, the rope gave a twist and came swingin' over on me, and knocked me right off the limb. I gave a yell and then I landed. Next I knew I was in bed. And that's all."

"Now I'll take up the wondrous tale," said Average Jones. "The Farleys, naturally discomfited by Bailey's abrupt and informal arrival, were in a quandary. Here was an inert boy on their hands. He might be dead, which would be bad. Or, he might be alive, which would be worse, if they left him."

"How so?" asked Rev. Mr. Prentice.

"Why, you see," explained Average Jones, "they couldn't tell how much he might have seen and heard before he made his hasty descent. He might have enough information to spoil their whole careful and elaborate plan."

"But what in the world was their plan?" demanded the minister.

"That comes later. They took off Bailey's coat and waistcoat, perhaps to see if his back was broken (Farley nodded), and finding him alive, tossed his clothes into the buggy, where Farley had left his own, completed their necessary work at top speed, and left the final performance to Tuxall. One of them conceived the idea of tossing Bailey's clothes upon the seabeach to establish a false clue of drowning, until they could decide what was to be done with him. In carrying this out they made the mistake which lighted up the whole trail."

"Well, I don't see it at all," said Farley glumly. "How did you ever get to us?"

Average Jones mildly contemplated the mathematical center of his questioner.

"New waistcoat?" he asked.

"Damn!" exploded Farley in sudden enlightenment.

"Just so. Your waistcoat got mixed with the boy's clothes, which are of the same common pattern, and was tossed out on the beach with his coat."

"The ad, Tim!" cried the woman. "Don't you remember, you couldn't find the rough draft you made while we were waiting?"

"That's right, too," he said. "It was in that waistcoat. But it didn't have no name on it."

"Then, that," put in Rev. Peter Prentice, "was the scrawled nonsense—"

"Which you—er threw into the waste basket," drawled Average Jones with a smile.

"But what does all this talk of people at work in the dark, and arson, and a mysterious creature tied in a tree lead to?"

"It leads," said Average Jones, "to a very large rock, much scorched, and with a peculiar carving on it, which now lies imbedded in the earth beneath Tuxall's barn."

"If you've seen that," said Farley, "it's all up."

"I haven't seen it. I've inferred it. But it's all up, nevertheless."

"Serves us right," said the woman disgustedly. "I wish we'd never heard of Tuxall and his line of bunk."

"Mystification upon mystification!" cried the clergyman. "What connection—"

"Pardon me, one moment. The 'live thing' in the tree was a captive balloon. The box on the ground was a battery. The wire from the battery was connected with a firework bomb, which, when Tuxall pressed the switch, exploded, releasing a flaming 'dropper,'

"I Shinned Up the Tree."

About the time the 'dropper' reached the earth Tuxall lighted up his well-oiled barn. All Harwick, having had its attention attracted by the explosion, and seen the portent with its own eyes believed that a huge meteor had fired the building. So Tuxall & Co. had a well attested wonder from the heavens. That's the little plan which Bailey's presence threatened to wreck. It was a big stake. Do you begin to see the meaning of the big print now?"

"I've heard nothing about big prints," said the puzzled clergyman.

"Pardon me, you've heard but you haven't understood. However, to go on, Tuxall and our friends here fixed up a plan on the prospects of a rich harvest from public curiosity and credulity. Tuxall planted a big rock under the barn, fixed it up appropriately with torch and chisel and sent for the Farleys, who are expert fireworkers and balloon people, to counterfeit a meteor."

"Amazing!" cried the clergyman.

"Such a meteor, furthermore, as had never been dreamed of before. If you were to visit Tuxall's barn, you would undoubtedly find on the bowlder underneath it a carving resembling a human form, a hoax more ambitious than the Cardiff giant. He carted the rock in from some quarry and did the scorching and carving himself, I suppose."

"And you discovered all that in a half day's visit to Harwick?" asked Rev. Mr. Prentice incredulously.

"No, but in half minute's reading of the 'gibberish' which you threw away."

Taking from the desk the reddish roll which he had brought into the room with him, he sent the loose end of it wheeling across the floor, until it lay, fully outspread. In black letters against red, the legend glared and blared its announcement:

MARVELOUS MANLIKE MONSTER

"Those letters, Mr. Prentice," pursued the Ad-Visor, "measure just three feet from top to bottom. I had the combination of a circus poster, an alleged meteor which burned down a barn in a highly suspicious manner and an apparently purposeless kidnaping. All that I had to do, then, was to find the deviser of the three-foot poster. He was sure to be Bailey's abductor."

"Say," said Farley with conviction, "I believe you're the devil's first cousin."

"When you left me in Harwick," said Rev. Peter Prentice, before Average Jones could acknowledge this flattering surmise, "you said that strangers had done the kidnaping. How could you tell they were strangers then?"

"From the fact that they didn't know who Bailey was, and had to advertise him indefinitely, as 'lost lad from Harwick.'"

"And that there were two of them?" pursued the minister.

"I surmised two minds. One that schemed out the 'planting' of the clothes on the shore; the other, more compassionate, that promulgated the advertisement."

"Finally, then, how could you know that Bailey was injured and unconscious?"

"If he hadn't been unconscious then and for long after, he'd have revealed his identity to his captors, wouldn't he?" explained the Ad-Visor.

There was a long pause. Then the woman said timidly:

"Well, and now what?"

"Nothing," answered Average Jones. "Tuxall has got away. Mr. Prentice has recovered his son. You and Farley have had your lesson. And I—"

"Yes, and you, Mr. Detectiveman," said the woman, as he paused. "What do you get out of it?"

Average Jones cast an affectionate glance at the sprawling legend which disfigured his floor.

"A unique curio in my own special line," he replied. "An ad which never has been published and never will be. That's enough for me."

KINGSTON, N. Y., FEB. 20, 1923.

The Anti-Saloon League of New York holds that its finances should not be investigated because it is not a political organization. If a sleeplessly active body which tries to elect candidates and to control others already elected is not a political organization, what is it?

Four more pardons to those convicted of criminal anarchy have been granted by Governor Smith. In his memorandum the governor said they were convicted on about the same grounds as "Big Jim Larkin. In the minds of many that should have been sufficient to keep them where they would do no harm.

It has been popularly supposed that musicians wear long hair because they think it "looks artistic," but a German scientist now comes forward to correct this misguided impression, gravely declaring that piano music actually causes a growth of thick hair upon its devotees. This means that we should not laugh at them—supposing that German science is in better shape than the German mark.

Economy may not be a popular subject even yet but there is reason to believe that it will be popular when the difference between what it cost to run the state under Republican auspices and what it cost to run it under Democratic methods is seen. Governor Smith says he is not worrying not does he intend to worry over what money is spent. This may be the spirit for the time being but there will be a day of reckoning sooner or later.

Our old friend capital punishment is up again for discussion. There are some who undoubtedly believe that it is no deterrent to crime, but sometimes we wonder if some of those who urge that it be abolished are not doing so partially as a means of personal publicity. The practice of self-advertising and self-exploitation has enlarged somewhat in recent years and if publicity is necessary it must be gotten either by being for something of against something.

HOW DID HE GET IT?

Frederick A. Wallis is heralded in a folder enclosed with his report of Democratic campaign finances as "the man of many jobs," ranging from elder in a Presbyterian Church to manager of the Hylan campaign and chairman of the finance committee of the Democratic State Committee. In his report Mr. Wallis points with pride to the fact that he raised and spent for the Democratic State Committee in the last election, $1,022,614.74, as compared with $1,042,542 raised in the entire country for the Democratic national campaign in 1912. It may have been Will Hays who said "get the money" in 1922, but it was Mr. Wallis who got the money and spent it in New York state in 1922, for he himself has said it.

DEGOUTTE'S PLAIN SPEECH.

The French advanced into the Ruhr because, as Edison has put it, "it was time to do something." Now, after a month during which the French have shown remarkable restraint, evidently General Degoutte thinks it is time to say something and to speak plainly. This renowned fighter can employ words as effectively as arms, for example:

Germany is branded as a quitter before the entire world; insolent, arrogant, pitiless in victory, but servile, self-pitying in defeat. Germany never will fight unless she believes she is stronger than her adversary. The moment she feels that an opponent is more powerful she surrenders. She pleaded and begged for an armistice under circumstances in which the Allies would have considered that they had just begun to fight. We did not quit after Sedan. We fought to the finish, we lost and we paid. If Germany forces another fight on us she will not stay our hands by crying "Kamerad."

General Degoutte merely tells the truth that is known to all the world, and Germany may well take note of the warning in his concluding words. The Allies had the victor's right to dictate the peace at Berlin. In the Armistice the French were denied the opportunity to do what the Germans did at Versailles in 1871. If the Germans do not wish to see the French masters of Berlin, after all, they would be wise to come to terms while they may, taking the medicine they so well deserve.

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. Is the black and white creeper any relation to the brown creeper?

No, the brown creeper is a titmouse, and the small black-and-white a warbler. Habits somewhat similar, as the warbler gets much food by gleaning small insects, larvae, and eggs, from tree trunks, which it runs over rather rapidly. Also examines old fences, fallen tree trunks that are mossy, for hidden insects. Black and white creepers share the warbler habit of quick, restless, continual motion, and flutter from one feeding spot to another.

2. How can lobsters get their claws out of their shells when they shed?

Just before the old shell is ready to be sloughed off, there is a temporary change in the texture of the body fibres which become softened. The muscle of the big claws becomes almost watery, and in this limp condition can be drawn through the small tube-like openings of the claws without being torn. Fishermen call a lobster just out of the shell "in the silk." Limy matter at once begins to be formed at the surface of the body, making a new shell.

3. What is the very tallest animal?

The giraffe, standing about 18 feet high, or even 20 feet in exceptional cases. The very long neck that holds the head aloft, is responsible, of course. The giraffe measures about 12 feet high at the shoulder; and the African elephant a trifle over 10 feet at the shoulder. The Asiatic elephant is smaller.

Remains of Stone Age Bears in Cave.

Relics of over 600 cave bears of the last Interglacial period have been found in the Drachenloch dragon's cavern about 4,400 feet above sea level, near Vattis, in the Tamina valley, canton of St. Gall. The Drachenloch forms an important cavern in the mountains called Drachenkopf. Its interior is subdivided by small stone walls about two feet high, behind which skulls and long bones have been found carefully stored up. A bear's skull artificially pierced by a thigh-bone was preserved in a stone chest near a firepit, apparently as a trophy. In the ashes of several fireplaces there were bones belonging to the feet of these animals. Skinning knives roughly made of shinbone and other instruments of Palaeolithic man were lying about. It is remarkable that all the bones are those of young animals.

Papers of Historic Importance.

Parnell papers that must have been laying in the room occupied by Irish nationalists for over thirty years have just been discovered. When the room occupied by the Irish nationalists in the house of commons for so many years was handed over recently to the national liberals, a quantity of Mr. Parnell's own papers were discovered which had been lying there since the days when their owner led the Irish nationalists. The papers have been taken charge of by the clerk of the works. Mr. Parnell died 31 years ago.

WHY

Nature Has Arranged for Sap to Rise in Trees.

The very interesting results obtained by Sir J. C. Bose, at the Bose Institute, Calcutta, in the investigation of the phenomenon of the ascent of sap are summarized in Nature Magazine. It is shown that the ascent of sap is a process of physiological activity dependent on the pulsation of living cells. This process is arrested by the action of poison, either in entire plants or in cut shoots. The active pulsating cells are not confined to the root, but are continued throughout the stem. It has been ascertained that in the stem of dicotyledons these cells constitute the cortical layer which abuts upon the endodermis.

The velocity of the ascent has been determined by three independent methods which give concordant results. The ascent takes place in plants even in the complete absence of transpiration. In "varnished" plants this velocity has been found sometimes to be as high as 70 meters per hour.

The cellular pulsations have been investigated and their characteristics determined from automatic records; they consist of alternate contractions and expansions. The direction of propulsion is determined by the phase difference of the adjacent cells. The velocity increases with the wave length of the propagated impulse. This wave length is determined experimentally from definite points of electric maxima and minima. Enhancement of velocity is associated with corresponding increase in the wave length. The enhanced rate of ascent is also attended by the increase of amplitude and frequency of cellular pulsations.

Ascent of sap depends upon cellular pulsation in tall trees as well as in herbaceous plants. There is, however, in the former the special adaptation of the woody tissue which serves as a reservoir to meet the excessive demand for water in the season of active transpiration. When this reservoir is more or less depleted, the phenomenon of "negative pressure" is manifest.

GASES ARE MOTIVE POWER

Why Rockets Rise When Light Is Applied Is a Simple Matter When Understood.

If you would see inside a rocket you would find the lower part of the case filled with powder, a chemical mixture that will burn at an enormous rate, and in doing so will produce a very large quantity of gas. The great heat generated by this burning mixture expands the gas and still further increases its volume, till it is bursting to get out of the rocket.

At the bottom end of the rocket is a hole through which the gas rushes into the air. Now the air at the mouth of the rocket strongly resents being kicked out of the way by this rushing stream of gas; it takes a moment to "get a move on," so to speak. But the gas in the case hasn't got a moment to spare; it simply must get out, so it kicks—hard.

If you had on a pair of roller skates, and held an open umbrella in front of you, you could push it away from you slowly without feeling any resistance; but if you thrust hard at the umbrella the air would resist the sudden movement so strongly that you would be rolled backward on your skates. Science shows that is just what happens to the rocket; the stream of gas spreads out at the mouth of the case and thrusts hard at the air below it and at the rocket above. As the air won't move quickly enough, the rocket must get out of the way. And it does—quickly.

Why Women Fail as Spies.

"Women do not make good spies," said Sir Basil Thompson, former head of the British secret service, speaking at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. "The real reason is that the woman spy gets compunction at just the wrong moment. She has obtained information from some one who should not have given it to her, and then when she should pass it along she feels it would be unfair to her informant and withholds it."

The speaker said that there is the greatest difference between the patriotic spy and the hireling spy. None of the former type was executed by the British during the war, he said, but 11 of the latter, all men, forfeited their lives.—New York Herald.

Why Do We Keep Pets?

Many pets are of direct use to us. A dog, for instance, protects our house, a cat catches mice, and so on.

There are, however, two far deeper motives.

A pet satisfies our instinct of ownership and mastery—one of the most profound desires at the back of our minds is to be absolute lord and master, arbiter of life and death. We gratify this wish most thoroughly by possessing a pet animal.

Why We Stop Growing.

We stop growing because certain body cells lose their power to increase in size and to produce other cells. It is one of the marvels of physiology that this is so and a wise provision of nature.

Why Snow Is White.

Snow is white because it is formed of an infinite number of very minute crystals and prisms, which reflect all the component rays of which white light consists.

TRAILS THIEF FROM ARCTIC TO TORONTO

Tale Out-Movies Any Movie and Out-Fictions Fiction.

HIS DOG AND FURS STOLEN

Boy Robbed in Far North, Trails His Assailants to a "Village" He had Heard About, Named Toronto—But Toronto, for One Who Was Starving, Wasn't the Place to Find a "Man in a Silver Fox Coat"—Came for Revenge.

Trailing the man who had stolen his huskies and his furs on a Northern trail, Jacques Richtor, a nineteen-year-old boy from Great Slave lake in Athabasca, just under the Arctic Circle, staggered from the blind baggage of the train from the West in the depot at Toronto, Ont.

"Hi, where are you going?" called a policeman who regarded the boy's appearance as suspicious.

"What business is it of yours?" answered the youth.

Of course the policeman grabbed him but when he did so he found the boy's great frame was emaciated, his cheeks sunken, his strength that of a kitten, and his face with a tell-tale pallor. So the boy was escorted not to the cells but to the hospital.

There it was found he was in an advanced stage of starvation. After food and rest he related a story of the great lone Northland that out-movies any movie, and out-fictions fiction.

Came for Revenge.

Revenge brought him to Toronto. Some one told him the man who had done him the great wrong in the silence of the Arctic had gone to Toronto. He had no idea where Toronto was or what it was—he assumed it was a trading post, maybe a village where he would be able to run his man down promptly. So he set out to find Toronto. And for 2,000 miles, all the way from Great Slave lake to Toronto, he beat his way. For the last four days of his journey his only nourishment had been one cup of tea. He has not found his man nor his huskies. And yet some day, somewhere—

Jacques Richtor's amazing journey is but one of many amazing things he relates. On the north shore of Great Slave lake he has lived from birth. He and his father are trappers. Fort Henry, where they take their furs, is 740 miles away. But here is Jacques' own story:

"I was born in the Athabasca. My father is seventy years old and stands six-foot seven. I don't know much of my mother. Father never speaks of her. He told me that she ran off with another man when I was two years old because she was tired of the loneliness. After that my father had to catch a deer and he raised me on deer milk.

"He was a chemist in England, and in our cabin we had several books on chemistry. We had three other books and on them I was educated. They were three books of Longfellow's poems, and my father taught me to read from them.

First Woman at Fifteen.

"I never saw a woman until I was fifteen. That year my father took me to Fort Henry. I asked him who this man was who wore such a long coat, and he told me it was a woman. He took me to a place they called a lunch house, and there I tasted pie for the first time. I had been brought up on meat and cornmeal bread. I ate a whole pie that time Then I had ice cream and strawberries, the first time I had them, and the last"

Here is Jacques' account of the strange adventure which brought him to civilization, an adventure still unguessed by the seventy-year-old father—the English chemist immured in the Arctic.

"We usually take our furs out from Great Slave lake in the summer, when the lakes break up, but last spring my father got sick and so we couldn't take our winter trapping down.

Started With Dog Team.

"I started out about two months ago with our last winter's work. I had two silver foxes, 120 beaver, 300 muskrats, 57 lynx, three bears and several otters. I had a good dog team of 12 huskies.

"I had gone about two-thirds of the way. One morning I saw a man lying in the middle of the trail with his snowshoes sticking up in the air. I thought he was dead. When I stooped over him two men jumped out of the bush and grabbed me. They hit me on the head with a club.

"The next thing I knew I was lying in the snow, my dogs gone, my furs gone, my guns gone. And worst of all they took my coat, a coat my father had given me. It was white seal with a silver fox collar, perfect fur. My father had got it from Indians who had bought it from the Eskimos.

"All I had left was a buckskin shirt, buckskin pants, fur underclothes, a fur cap, mitts, and my hunting knife. I don't remember much after that. I thought I'd die, but first I wanted to get the men who stole my dogs and my furs.

"I had to get to Fort Henry. I don't remember just how I got there or just how long it took me. I made traps from moccasin laces and caught rabbits. I cut limbs from a tree and made a bow, and with this I started a fire. It took four hours to get it going. But the next time it was easier, for I carried the charcoal from the old fire. I'd run for three miles, and then I'd build a fire. At night I dug myself into snowbanks or slept in ravines below the level of the surface of the earth.

Furs Sold for $812.

"One day I got to Fort Henry. I went to the man at the post and told him what had happened He told me that he had bought my furs and he showed them to me. He had paid $812 for them. And then he told me that the man who had sold them was wearing a white seal coat He had sold all my dogs but the lead dog, I don't know how he could manage him, for I had raised him from a pup, and even my father could not touch him.

"The men at the post told me that the man who had sold my furs said he was going to a place called Toronto He said he was going to take my dog with him

"I know I could tell my white coat and my dog anywhere, so if I saw them I could get the man. And if I got him I'd cut him up in little bits. So I asked where Toronto was and they told me it was a pretty good sized town down South and that I couldn't miss it, for at the station there was a big board with Toronto painted on it

"They told me my buckskin pants would look funny so they gave me a lot of woolen clothes for them. And another man at the post gave me enough money to take me South in some kind of machine.

"It had four wheels with rubber on them. I don't know how long we traveled this way. The trails were snowed in in places, but we managed to get through.

"We came to another post where there seemed to be more people. I saw a policeman here and I asked him where I could stay for the night He told me to go to the police station Here they told me I could sleep on the floor. I asked them where Toronto was They told me I'd have to go on a train, but I didn't know what that was Then they described it and they told me how to ride blind baggage. So the next morning I went where they told me, to a station. I asked where the train to Toronto was and when no one was looking I jumped on behind the coal car

Two Dollars From the Police.

"I rode all that day. When night came I jumped off at a station and asked a policeman where to sleep. Again I slept at a police station. Next morning I told the police my story These policemen collected some money, about $2, and gave it to me That did me for a couple of days to buy food Each night I slept in a police station, and each morning I asked where was the train for Toronto and hopped on to the baggage car.

"When I got to Toronto I was feeling sick As I came out of the train yard a policeman asked me where I was going. I asked him what business it was of his, and then he grabbed me. In my country he'd have no business asking you where you are going. But when I told him I wasn't feeling well he sent me to this hospital.

"I thought that Toronto was just a town, and that I could run across the man who took my coat and dog," said Jacques; "but I guess I'll never meet him. But if I do, and I have a knife, I'll cut him into little bits or bite his ears off."

With his chances of getting revenge gone, Richtor's first thought was to get out of the city. A job as a lumberjack was secured for him, and he has left for a northern Ontario camp. He hopes to earn enough money to buy a ticket and ride in state back to Athabasca.

Scarcely had Richter left for northern Ontario when a telegram came from Alberta police announcing that a man was being held for the murder of Jacques Richter. Evidently the whole story has not yet been told.

SCIENCE A STERN MISTRESS

Demands Sacrifices, Even to Death, of Those Enlisted in Her Wondrous Service.

After weeks of observation perched high among the branches of a tree in a Kentish wood, Capt. C. W. R. Knight succeeded in obtaining a complete film record of the life of the sparrowhawk.

Few, however, of those who enjoy this film will give a second thought to the cramped misery of sitting for hours and hours on such an insecure perch, to say nothing of the amazing patience needed for such a task.

The extraordinary thing is that there are always so many eager volunteers in the cause of science, men—and women, too—who think no risk too great if, by their efforts, new knowledge can be obtained for the help of civilization.

Take the case of the volcanologists, enjoins a London Answers writer. During the eruption of 1872 Professor Palmieri remained at his post in his observatory during the entire time. Toward the end of the convulsion rivers of boiling lava were pouring down on either side of the building, while the atmosphere was almost unbreakable because of the sulphurous fumes.

In 1914 Professor Mallandra went one better by spending a whole night making observations within the crater of a volcano, the floor of which was so brilliantly lit up by incandescent fountains that at midnight he could read by the light.

Imagine the sensation of holding a 12-foot cobra behind the head with your left hand, while your right hand applies an instrument to its eye through which you must look, the deadly brute at the same time darting out its venomed fangs within a few inches of your face! Fancy doing this for two or three hours a day for a week on end! Yet such a task was actually accomplished by Mr. Head while engaged in painting the eye of the cobra.

Of lives sacrificed to science during the present century, the list is a terribly long one Of X-ray martyrs alone there are over a score. In November, 1920, died Dr. Charles Infroit losing first his fingers, then his hand finally both arms, yet, though perfectly conscious of his impending doom, working relentlessly on.

Poison gas research maimed some and killed others. A notable name is that of Col. E. F. Hardison, who risked death by poisoning that our troops might be properly equipped to withstand the German gas. Eventually his lungs became so impregnated with the poison that, when influenza seized him, he had no strength left to withstand it.

The Bright Proceeding.

Mrs. Grandways was calling upon Mrs. Cassidy, whose husband was well-to-do and whose daughter had therefore been sent to college.

"By the way," said Mrs. Grandways, when the two had been gossiping for a while, "where is Clara? I haven't seen her for an age."

Mrs. Cassidy swelled with pride.

"Clara is at college," she replied, with grandeur. And then added: "And I am so worried about her. I haven't had a letter from her for nearly two weeks."

"That is where you made the mistake," was the prompt rejoinder of Mrs. Grandways. "Instead of letting her go to college you should have sent her to one of those correspondence schools."

First "Trust" in United States.

The first of the industrial trusts was formed in 1879 by the Standard Oil interests under the guiding genius of S. C. T. Todd, later vice president and general counsel of that unusual aggregation of properties and brains. The success of the Standard Oil trust was so pronounced that within the decade immediately following a half-dozen other trusts were formed and began operation.

GAVE NO THOUGHT TO PAPA

Mother Might at Least Have Warned Him, but It Is All Too Late Now.

There is a genial fellow of our acquaintance who possesses a daughter—the lucky dog! This particular man is a queer sort of cuss and he has always thought, along with Barrie, that there are only two great epochs in a girl's life. Contrary to all accepted thought upon the subject, marriage is not one of them. The first great event is when the initial recognizable smile ripples into baby laughter; the second when she puts up her hair.

This man we have in mind had made a sort of dream ritual of this latter and had planned a thousand ways in turning the matter over in his inner consciousness how he would invest the ceremony with a thousand little graces, remarks a writer in the Baltimore News. They would talk about it ever so much beforehand and as the day drew near there would be many little backward flights and timorous fears of how it would all turn out. In her childhood days he would often toss her little mane up backward and she, the little minx, would tantalize him in turn by parading before him with a mountain of finespun gold banked on her dainty little head. It was to be a monumental occasion and the poor fellow hugged the thought to himself. They would plan for it as for a lord mayor's ceremonial.

The blow fell, as most blows fall, suddenly, unexpectedly. He went home of an evening, carefree, joyous, to romp with this girl-child as of old. She was going to a party and she was fifteen going on sixteen, and her mother, without a word of preparation for the shock, with a thoughtlessness almost sublime, had borne her off to a hairdresser, where all the iniquitous rites of that diabolical institution were perpetrated. We doubt very much whether this genial fellow will ever be quite the same—the deepest, the most poignant hurts somehow or other always seem to come out of thoughtlessness and the failure to grasp even faintly the other fellow's point of view. Even fathers have a few temples where they make prayer.

"Paternalism" in Sweden.

In Sweden a farmer can be reprimanded by the governor of a province for abusing "mother earth." Over 1,100 cases of abusing farm land by neglecting to cultivate it properly have been dealt with during the last four years.

There has been some discussion as to definitions by those charged with determining when a farmer should be censured for neglect for his land, but the Swedish cultivation extension committee has come to the conclusion that corrective measures are necessary where land was found overgrown with weeds, where a field yielded notably less than the neighboring fields, where the annual production decreased, or where grain had been disposed of unthrashed. Of the 1,177 cases considered 128 had to be brought to the attention of provincial governors before improvement was effected.

Farm Episode.

"Gabe, what are you doing in the farm yard?"

"Nuffin, boss."

"You didn't come over to molest my henhouse?"

"No, boss."

"I see. You came over to chop some wood for me."

"Dat's it."

And Gabe had to chop two hours before the foxy farmer would let him go.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

BRAVE NEWFOUNDLAND

"I have a true story to tell you this evening," said Daddy, "of a Newfoundland dog.

"That they are very big dogs you know from the pictures you've seen even if you've never seen a real one."

"Oh, I've seen one," said Nancy. "Don't you remember, Daddy, when we were visiting our cousin? She had a big Newfoundland dog, and I used to ride him all about. What fun I did have."

"And what a wonderful dog he was," added Nick. "He was a marvelous fellow."

"They are wonderful dogs," Daddy continued, "and this dog was one of the regular ones, too.

"How many brave things they've done, how many lives they've saved. They are heroes and they are always doing splendid things and being noble.

"They are so clever and intelligent, too.

"But to tell you about this dog. He was living in Newfoundland, as well as being a Newfoundland dog.

"His home was right on the coast and one day there was a terrible storm. The wind raged and howled and the waters were dark and wild. The waves were very high and they dashed up in a tremendous fashion on the great rocks.

"Suddenly a ship which was trying to make its way through the terrible storm was dashed upon the rocks.

"It was shipwrecked and the poor passengers did not know what to do. The water would soon come rushing in the boat.

"What would the end be?

"They hoped and prayed for safety but they could scarcely believe that safety would come and that they would live through this horrible experience.

"I Used to Ride Him."

For it seemed as though no one could come out to help them through the gale and through the storm.

"Then they threw out their life-line. But the life-line was caught on some of the rocks. The poor shipwrecked people did not know what to do. They couldn't get hold of the life-line, and those on the shore to whom they had cast out the life-line couldn't pull it to the shore because the rocks held it fast.

"In the meantime the moments were hurrying by and as they hurried along the danger became greater and greater.

"A Newfoundland dog showed his sorrow in his eyes as he watched the efforts being made to save the people—the efforts which weren't working out into anything.

"The people didn't dare go into the water—it was too wild, and boats would only have been dashed on the rocks, too, but the Newfoundland dog took the great and mighty plunge.

"People would drown unless he did what he could. Perhaps he wouldn't succeed, but at least he would try. At least that!

"The men explained to him that the rope must be released from the rocks upon which it had caught. Yes, he understood. He wagged his tail and barked and showed by his wise eyes that he understood.

"Then into the water he went. Bravely he swam on. Nothing counted for him but the fact that people would drown if he didn't set free that life-line.

"And to the life-line he swam. His brave heart never lost courage. And he released the life-line. Then it was easy enough for the men to fasten it upon the shore when he had brought the stout rope to them in his teeth.

"He swam with that rope tightly held and never let go of it, right through the high waves, right through the waters where men did not dare go.

"Then they got the people from the shipwrecked boat ashore. Ninety-two people who would have been drowned were saved by the Newfoundland dog.

"A little baby was among the number, and when the great, brave animal was gratefully patted and thanked by those he had rescued, he kissed the little baby's hand and said in his dog way:

"'It is only what I should have done.'"

Child Philosophy.

Bobby and Betty were in the same grade—a class of 45. Betty stood second in rank, Bobby was fourteenth. His father felt very sad.

"Bobby, don't you hate to think of those 13 children ahead of you?"

The reply came instantly. "Oh, no. I just think of the 31 behind me."

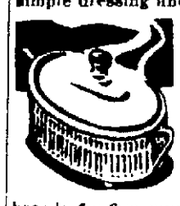
Give pleasure. Lose no chance of giving pleasure. For that is the ceaseless and anonymous triumph of a truly loving spirit.—Henry Drummond.

WHAT TO HAVE FOR DINNER.

With a crisp, green salad, with a simple dressing and the cottage cheese served with currant jelly, the following recipes will work into a fairly eatable meal.



English Meat Dish.—Parboil a pair of sweetbreads for five minutes and cook for ten minutes in one cupful of rich stock. Drain and cool. Prepare a pair of calves' brains, using the same stock. Wash and clean the heart (and kidneys if liked) slice and cook them in the stock until well done. Saute the heart in butter until brown, dip sweetbreads and brains in egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat. Add to the butter in the pan two tablespoonfuls of black currant jelly, when melted add two tablespoonfuls of flour, add this to the stock, let it boil up once, and pour over the meats in a hot dish. Serve with peeled potatoes, baked.

Potato Soup.—Cook and mash three good-sized potatoes. To a quart of milk (skimmed milk may be used) add a slice of onion and a stalk of celery; scald and remove the vegetables and pour over the mashed potato. In a saucepan put two tablespoonfuls of butter, if skimmed milk is used; add two tablespoonfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of salt and when well blended add to the soup and cook until the flour is well cooked. Serve with toasted crackers. Celery cut in short lengths and filled with seasoned cheese is a good relish to serve with any menu.

Cottage Cheese.—This may be easily made at home if there is plenty of sour milk. Pour two quarts of boiling water into two quarts of sour milk which is well thickened. Let stand until the curds begin to form, then pour into a cheesecloth bag and hang to drain over night. Remove the curd and season well with cream, salt, white and cayenne pepper. Mix until smooth and place on ice until ready to serve.

The addition of a few tablespoonfuls of cheese to any cream soup will add to the flavor and nutritive value of the dish.

MILTON.

Milton, Feb. 19.—The Men's Club are planning to hold a minstrel show during the first or second week of March

C. J. Hepworth, J. W. Clarke of Milton and Fred H. Dunn of Marlborough have been having radio outfits installed in their homes.

James A. Conklin has accepted a permanent position in the municipal survey department of New York city. Prior to his coming to Milton several years ago Mr. Conklin served four years in this same business. At present he will continue his residence here, coming to Milton for the week ends.

Albert Veach has started a taxi service in our village.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Clarke, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Bell, Mrs. Foster Clarke and Ralph Martin entertained at the meeting of the Milton Grange last Monday evening.

Our fruit growers are reporting that much damage is being done to their apple trees by the field mice this winter.

Edward Theill has leased the ice house and ice business of James A. Conklin and will continue the business which Mr Conklin has built up. This includes the contract for icing the fruit cars for the Fruit Exchange and local trade, etc.

Several of our fruit growers are attending the State Horticultural Meeting in Poughkeepsie this week.

At the recent annual meeting of the Hudson River Fruit Exchange the following officers were elected: President, J. W. Clarke, Milton; vice-president, C. C. Dymond of Ulster Park; secretary, W. P. Garmany of Marlborough; treasurer, C. J. Hepworth, Milton.

T. M. Woolsey is quite ill at his home on Main street with an attack of the grip.

J. Milo Hepworth who has been spending several weeks at Miami, Florida, returned home last week.

Miss Nellie Smith of West New York spent the holiday at the home of Mrs. Stott Anderson on the North road.

Mrs. Edward Young has been seriously ill the past week with an attack of lumbago.

A. H. Anderson of the Elverhoj Art Colony sailed last week for Denmark to visit his home there.

Percy V. Bunker, sales agent for the Essex and Hudson cars, has been displaying one of the new Essex coach models.

Isaac Forster has leased the cooperage building of A. L. Strickland and will use it for storing his demonstrating car for which he is agent.

There is considerable sickness in our village and vicinity caused by the grip. Among those who have been suffering from this epidemic here are Mrs. Isaac Forster, Miss Hilda Forster, Mrs. Henry DuBois, Miss I. F. Woolsey, C. M. Woolsey, Mrs. Alfred T. Jenkins, William R. Ordway, correspondent of the daily Freeman.

Miss May Lee Bine of Mount Vernon, N. Y., has been a recent guest of Mrs. Henry DuBois.

ALLIGERVILLE.

Alligerville, Feb. 19.—Ralph W. Van Wagenen died at his home Sunday night after a long illness. He had just passed his 72nd birthday and had always lived in the old Van Wagenen homestead where he died. He leaves a wife, Mary Harnden Van Wagenen and several nieces and nephews. Mr. Van Wagenen was a charter member of the Rondout Valley K. of P. and a very faithful and liberal supporter of the Alligerville Dutch Reformed Church, into which he was baptized when an infant. Mr. Van Wagenen was a man of sterling qualities and will be sadly missed by many loving friends.

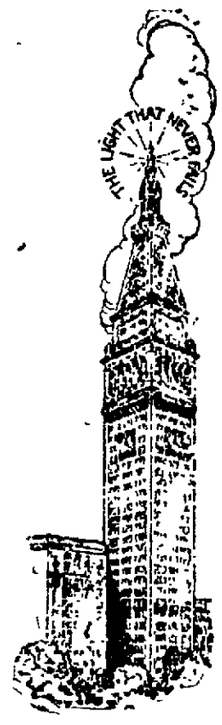
Twenty million people mutually own the biggest life insurance company in the world. It is The Metropolitan.

One person in every six in the United States and Canada is a holder of a Metropolitan policy—one of the safest forms of investment known to man.

Metropolitan policyholders live longer than other people because The Metropolitan takes care of its policyholders.

At the same time The Metropolitan is working in cooperation with private, public, civic, state and national organizations to improve the health and living conditions of every man, woman and child in this Country and Canada.

1923



Why Metropolitan Policyholders Live Longer—

Metropolitan has distributed 272,000,000 booklets and pamphlets dealing with health and longer life.

Metropolitan nurses have made more than 16,000,000 free visits to its Industrial (i.e., weekly premium) Policyholders.

Metropolitan extends free periodic medical examinations to holders of Ordinary (i. e., other than industrial) policies.

Metropolitan, working with National, State and Local Health Agencies, is waging a war on Tuberculosis and other preventable diseases.

Life expectancy among Metropolitan Industrial Policyholders has been extended 8 ½ years since 1911.

Why Metropolitan Policyholders Live Better—

The Metropolitan Agent is a friend to the families he visits and helps them in case of sickness.

17,000 Agents visit the homes of 17,000,000 Industrial Policyholders weekly—telling them of the value of sanitation, fresh air and sunshine.

Among the useful booklets distributed by the Agents are those telling how to buy food, how to care for food, how to cook food, how to provide wholesome, nourishing food for the least money.

ANADA HAS 2 WOMEN TO HANG

ominion is Greatly Agitated and Sentiment is Being Aroused to Secure Clemency.

r Telegraph to The Freeman.

Montreal, Que., Feb. 20.—Canada oday is aroused by the prospect of nding two women to the gallows -one for the murder of an officer, nother for slaying her husband.

They are Mrs. Florence Lassan-re, convicted of killing Constable . O. Lawson, and Mrs. Irene Chris-ians, sentenced for the death of er husband. Both women are res-dents of Alberta. Sentiment roughout the dominion has been roked in an effort to secure clem-ncy and abolish the death penalty r women. It has been met by fer-d arguments of those who believe here should be no discrimination.

Added feeling has been given the ontroversy by the furore aroused r the execution in England of Mrs. lora Thompson for the murder of er husband.

Mrs. Lassandra and Emilio Pic-arillo, originally sentenced to die omorrow, were granted a month's ay of execution on the intimation hat appeal of the sentence would e taken to the supreme court of anada.

Sentiment in the woman's favor, rong in other provinces of Canada, almost negligible in the woman's ome, where the inhabitants are id to have been so aroused by the fficer's death that they are clam-ring for the woman's life. So in-ense is this feeling that the Pris-ners' Welfare Association of Can-da, which protested on general rounds against the execution of a oman, was unable to induce any ewspaper in Calgary or Edmonton print its plea. One Calgary news-aper even refused to accept a paid dvertisement setting forth the as-ociation's stand

No appeal from the original sen-ence has been taken in the case of rs. Christians, but she is not sen-tenced to die until April and appeal probably will be made.

Officers who accompanied Constable Lawson on a bootlegging raid in the Alberta hills, testified Mrs. Lassandra fired the shot that killed the officer.

In passing the death sentence the judge said the evidence made any other verdict impossible, but that he hoped that clemency might be shown the woman because of her sex

Canada's most recent hanging of a woman was 20 years ago at St. Scholasti, Que., where a rescue was attempted the day of the hanging. The case was comparable to the Thompson-Bywaters case in England, the woman and her lover being sentenced for murder of the woman's husband.

Criminal friends of the man attempted to stop the hangings. They broke into the jail and overcame the police, but soldiers put the mob to rout. The man and woman went to their deaths reviling each other.

Public feeling was so high at the time that it was believed a woman never would be hanged again in Canada.

Hear Los Angeles on One Cell.

On Saturday, February 17, and also on Sunday, February 18, Elmer King and Donald Warren were listening in on the radio set of Harrison King of Pine street, which he purchased of Charles A. Warren, and heard a concert both days from Station KFI of Los Angeles, an also Station WFAZ of South Carolina. The Los Angeles station was heard at 7:30 p. m., eastern standard time, which would be 4:30 western standard time. This set is run on the W. D. 11 one and a half volt tubes which run on an ordinary dry cell which costs but 35 cents.

English Women Weather Prophets.

Three young women employed at the meteorological office in London can claim to be the only women "weather clerks" in Great Britain. All three are university graduates and fully qualified by practical experience to deal with all the problems of forecasting and compilation necessary in the preparation of the daily weather reports and prophecies.

KINGSTON CHAPTER IS 25 YEARS OLD

Instituted a Quarter Century Ago, Kingston Chapter No. 155, O. E. S., Will Appropriately Celebrate Event Friday Evening, March 2.

A quarter of a century ago Kingston Chapter, No. 155, Order of the Eastern Star, was instituted with Mr. and Mrs. Oscar L. Eastman as worthy patron and worthy matron, and in the years that have passed the chapter has grown steadily in membership and importance until today it is one of the leading chapters in this section of the state.

The chapter on Friday evening, March 2, will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary with an appropriate program and banquet. Among the visitors who will be present and speak on that occasion will be District Deputy Mrs. Nellie McWilliams of Prattsville and Assistant Grand Lecturer Bogardus of Cairo.

The chapter meets the first and third Fridays in each month in the Masonic building at Broadway and Strand. During the past quarter century the chapter has had but four patrons, Oscar L. Eastman, Harry A. Tremper, Dr. John R. Gillett, M. Edgar Powley, and the present patron, William A. Van Valkenburgh.

The matrons who have served Kingston Chapter during the past twenty-five years are: Mrs. Kate Eastman, Mrs. Elizabeth Terwilliger, Mrs. Margaret A. Johnston, Mrs. Lottie Stephan, Miss Ada A. Newland, Mrs. Mary Kent Comstock, Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Winter, Mrs. Elizabeth McCullough Hendricks, Mrs. Phebe E. Roosa, Mrs. Lillian B. Shultis Hubne, Mrs. Harriet Anderson Smith, Mrs. Edith Ellison Van Wagenen, Mrs. Emma Parish, Mrs. Margaret Bishop, Mrs. Eleanor Y. Schryver, Miss Mary McCullough, Mrs. Irene Schuster Holstein, Mrs. Eva Mae Parish, Mrs. Nellie Clarke Klothe, Mrs. Sadie Ostrander Shultis, Mrs. Nettie Rodman, Mrs. Jennie Frances Scott Main, Mrs. Florence Clarke Leverett and the present matron, Mrs. Carolyn P. Sullivan.

The 1923 officers of Kingston Chapter are: Worthy matron, Mrs. Carolyn P. Sullivan; worthy patron, William A. Van Valkenburgh; associate matron, Mrs. Minnie Charlotte Coutant; treasurer, Mrs. Kate Eastman; secretary, Mrs. Elizabeth Terwilliger; conductress, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Van Valkenburgh; associate conductress, Mrs. Minnie Neebe; chaplain, Mrs. Anna Ida Lauren; marshal, Mrs. Marian Ethel Hudler; historian, Mrs. Laura M. Hutton; Esther, Miss Gertrude Smith; Martha, Miss Emma Jeanette Schoonmaker; Electa, Mrs. Frances Comstock Darling; color bearer, Mrs. Freda Johanna Semon; sentinel, George B. Main; trustees, Mrs. Margaret A. Johnston, Mrs. Mary Kent Comstock and Charles E. Bishop.

To do most good a food must taste good

THE crispness and flavor of Grape-Nuts help to make this delicious cereal food most nourishing.

From the very first taste of Grape-Nuts the digestive processes start converting the rich nutritive and mineral elements of this wheat-and-barley food into body-building material.

Grape-Nuts, with good milk, is a complete food, affording that real enjoyment so necessary to good digestion and perfect assimilation.

Most economical, too, because a moderate quantity of Grape-Nuts provides an unusual amount of nourishment.

INSURANCE RECORD BROKEN INDICATES GOOD BUSINESS

Metropolitan Again Reports Huge New Placements.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company broke all records in amount of business done in the year 1922, according to a report published today. The amount of new business placed on the books exceeded the phenomenal year of 1920 and was far in excess of what had been done in 1921. The officers of the company believe that this certainly reflects improved business conditions.

Particularly significant is the fact that industrial insurance, which is taken largely by wage earners and their families, had such a great volume. The total amount of industrial insurance placed during the year was over $775,000,000. The investment situation is also good. The income of the company increased by over thirty-eight and a half million dollars that of 1921, reaching the total of $340,668,301. The assets of the company increased $144,267,300 and at the end of the year stood at $1,259,850,325. The mortality increased somewhat as compared with the previous year, and the total number of claims paid was 365,276. This was an average of one claim paid every 24 seconds of each business day of eight hours, or just about 1,000 a day during the year, including Sundays and holidays. The amount paid to policyholders averaged $803.81 a minute of each business day.

Kellogg's Bran is prepared to do one thing—AND DO IT WELL!

Kellogg's Bran will permanently relieve constipation, mild or chronic. It is scientifically prepared for that purpose. It is ALL BRAN, therefore it has the necessary bulk to assure results. Foods with a small bran content cannot afford permanent relief.

When your physician or friends advise you to eat Kellogg's Bran, you follow-on for the purpose of eliminating a dangerous clogging-up and toxic condition of your system. You can't afford to take half-way measures! Think of the lost time and the dangers of illness you are daily dodging!

What you must have is real bran—KELLOGG'S BRAN, and if you will eat it regularly each day you will become a different person within a week or so. Kellogg's Bran, with its natural bulk, sweeps, cleanses and purifies. It not only gives relief, but it regulates the bowels. Every member of your family should eat it—every day—at least two tablespoonfuls; in chronic cases as much with each meal.

Try Kellogg's Bran mixed with a hot cereal, or cook it with hot cereals, adding two tablespoonfuls of Bran for each person. Other popular ways are to sprinkle Kellogg's Bran on hot or cold cereals or to eat it as a cereal with hot milk. You can make delicious bakery products with Kellogg's Bran. Recipes on every package.

Kellogg's Bran is not only nationally sold in grocery stores, but can be had in individual packages in first-class hotels and clubs. Ask for it at your restaurant. Be certain to eat Kellogg's Bran daily for health's sake!

FREEMAN WANT ADS. BRING RESULTS

THE OFFICE CAT

By Junius

A Good Creed!

More faith in ourselves we need;
More faith in the other man;
More faith in the friendly deed;
More faith in the helping hand.
More faith in our nation's glory;
More faith in the men who lead;
More faith in love's old story—
Let's take that for our creed!

No Fun in It for Them.

Some of the crusaders are threatening to start a crusade to stop flirting. Evidently they find the flirting poor.

Frequently the man who wants what he wants when he wants it doesn't get it at all.

"Can a poet make a living?" asks the editor of an Ohio paper. Yes. He can get a job hauling coal.

Doctor Coue might better have it this way: Day by day, in every way, taxes are getting higher and higher.

The fact that she happens to think as he does won't keep a man's wife from contradicting him.

The Americans are becoming a pessimistic people, unable to view an altruistic act on the part of a public man without suspecting him of a selfish motive. And they are right—just about often enough to keep them suspicious permanently.

The following tale is told on a prominent shoe man: "An unusually amazing incident was witnessed by a customer in a prominent shoe store the other day. A lady of stupendous dimensions, stylishly attired, entered the store and seated herself to be waited upon. Soon a bald-headed clerk came up to serve her. After rejecting this pair and that, she decided on some brown oxfords. The clerk knelt down to lace them, and she looked down and saw the bald head. Thinking that it was her rolled topped knee, she modestly drew her skirt over it.

But Why Thus Appear?

In olden days you could appear
Out on the porch at night
In scant attire and never fear
About an auto light.

God created the women beautiful and foolish—beautiful so the men would love them, foolish so they would love the men.

Very often when people lead a lonely life they are poor company.

A pessimist's life is unusually a greater burden to his neighbors than to himself.

You can be a bluffer only as long as your money holds out.

Judge—You are sentenced to hang by the neck until dead.
Prisoner—Judge, I believe you're stringing me.

Which Served Very Well.

"This check is doubtless all right," said the bank cashier politely, "but, have you anything about you by which you could be identified?"

The pretty young thing faltered: "I have a mole on my left elbow."

Wails of the Modern Girl to "Father Time."

Turn back, "Father Time," turn back,
And give us the dear old days of yore
When gentlemen, romance did not lack,
And ladies had real happiness to live for.

Backward, "Father Time," though it may mean
That modern wonders we must forsake,
For youth sees life from an eye that's keen,
And of plentiful thrills must partake.

"Father Time," perhaps this statement will rage
Man, who has accomplished much so far—
But gone, gone is the chivalrous age,
Is it never no more to star?

What care the women for their chance,
For their right to ease trouble and strife;
And though like man we can advance,
Slipping from us is life!

Oh, "Father Time," please pause awhile,
And listen to our humble plea,
We want love in the good old style,
And we'll be contended as can be.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR ROSENDALE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Is Now Clear of Debt and Has Cash Balance.

The Rosendale Baptist Church has come to the close of its fiscal year in a flourishing condition with every obligation met, the church free and clear of any debt whatsoever and a balance in the treasury. Every department reports marked progress. The contract for giving both church and parsonage each two coats of paint has been awarded to Howard Stearns, who so efficiently redecorated the interior of the church last year. Mr. Stearns will begin his work on the outside of the buildings in the early spring. This painting has been made possible by the generous contributions of some of the pastor's personal friends, also Mr. Herzog for a low figure on oil and lead and William Snyder for taking this material from Kingston to Rosendale free of charge, to all of whom the church is deeply grateful.

It had been hoped to have an evangelistic campaign this winter but the weather conditions and shortage of fuel has made this impossible. It is expected that special meetings will be held some time this spring. Holy week is to be observed as sacrifice week, when each member of the church and congregation is asked to sacrifice the purchase of some things they can do without and bring this money in Easter Sunday as an offering to the Lord. There has been service every Sunday this winter with the exception of three, when the weather prohibited. There has not been a brighter outlook for this church in many years than there is at the present time.

Another Big Score by "Our Dick", Greater Still Than Anything He Has Done Before!

Richard Barthelmess in "The Bond Boy"

"THE BOND BOY" in unquestionably the greatest success that has yet been achieved by Mr. Richard Barthelmess. It could not be otherwise, as Dick is cast in the role of "Joe Newbolt" and the part "just fits." "Joe" is the boy, bonded out to an unscrupulous farmer, and driven, through slavery, to the shadow of the gallows. He suffers untold anguish, all to keep his mother from the poor-house. And there you will find acting that is simply superb, by Mr. Barthelmess and the remarkable cast supporting him. It's the sort of a picture that brings the lump up in your throat, with just enough sunshine to chase away the tears.

OPEN FILIBUSTER ON SHIP SUBSIDY

Led by Brookhart and Fletcher Opponents Plan to Talk Measure to Death—Couzens to Read Scriptures.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Feb. 20.—The coalition fight of Republican insurgents and Democrats in the senate to prevent enactment of the administration ship subsidy bill developed today into an open filibuster with all parliamentary niceties cast to the four winds.

A continuous session of the senate, day and night, until one group surrenders from exhaustion, was forecast today as supporters and opponents rallied their forces. It was described by both sides as a battle to a finish with the fate of the subsidy in the balance.

A new "battalion of death" was formed by Senators Brookhart, Republican, of Iowa, and Fletcher, Democrat, of Florida, to combat the bill. With 31 senators already enlisted, the battalion's leaders declared they would "talk the subsidy to death, day and night."

In reply to this threat, Senator Jones, Republican, of Washington, leader of the administration forces, announced formally the senate would be held in continuous session all day today all night tonight, and all day tomorrow, to break the filibuster. Beyond that period, the administration leader said his plans were not yet formed.

"This is to be a fight asked by the president in his message to congress," said Jones. "We are determined to stop all attempts to delay action on the bill by dilatory tactics. We'll let its opponents talk themselves out until they are ready to vote. A majority of the senate favor the bill and its passage and it is my intention to do everything possible to give them a chance to vote on it."

Another movement, inside the filibuster, was directed at killing the subsidy by substituting the Ladd "filled milk" bill as the measure under consideration. A vote on a motion by Senator Ladd, Republican, of North Dakota, to take this action, was still pending before the senate when it convened.

Six Republicans already are enrolled in the "battalion," according to Brookhart. These are, besides the Iowan, Senators Borah, of Idaho; Couzens of Michigan; Lafollette of Wisconsin; Ladd, of North Dakota, and Norris, of Nebraska. Each has been allotted a six hour term for "holding the fort" against the subsidy.

Their subjects, as announced by Brookhart, will range from "reading the scriptures" by Couzens to an "address on the state of the Union" by Norris.

"We're in this fight against the subsidy to a finish," said Brookhart. "We'll talk from now until March 4, day and night. There are six Republicans and 25 Democrats enlisted to date with more likely to join every minute. We'll give them plenty of talk. Senator Couzens will read the scriptures from Noah's Ark to the resurrection and Senator Ladd can speak a whole day on the subsidy. Senator Borah will tell them about Russia, Senator Norris will give an address on the state of the Union, while Senator Lafollette and myself are good for a couple of more days on general subjects. The subsidy will not pass."

More than a score of Democrats were also ready to "hold the fort" for the "battalion." Senator Sheppard, Democrat, of Texas, announced he had a "sixteen hour speech" on the league of nations and Senator McKellar, Democrat, of Tennessee, declared he would read Senator Smoot's thirteen hour speech against the sale of German ships.

Indications today were the cots would be brought into the senate chamber for the comfort of senators tonight as both factions declared their willingness to battle out the issue to the "bitter end."

OUT OF PRACTICE BUT MAKES RUN OF 91.

Members of the Kingston Club have placed John G. Van Etten in the professional billiard players' class, the reason being that in a three-ball game with Rudolph Kenyon as his oponent, Judge Van Etten a few nights ago, made a run of 91 points. He fell down on an easy shot. As Mr. Van Etten is out of practice, his big run is considered marvelous.

WALDEN SUBSCRIBING FOR AUTO FACTORY.

Plan is to Make David Dunbar Buicks in Borden Condensery.

Walden has dreams of prosperity and growth like some of the towns in Michigan which have become flourishing cities almost overnight through the establishment of automobile plants in them. Walden despatches say that David Dunbar Buick, originator of the valve-in-head motor, is leading the movement to establish there a plant for the manufacture of the David Dunbar Buick automobile and that money is being subscribed to purchase the former Borden condensery to be used as a manufacturing plant. The subscribers are to be secured through a mortgage bond of $55,000, delivered to subscribers in certificates of from $25 to $100 denominations. Stock may be taken in lieu of the certificates. A searching investigation is said to have disclosed that there is not much money behind the leading promoters.

"It is an assured fact," says a despatch to the Newburgh News, "that after the meeting Tuesday night and after a re-canvass of the subscribers, the money will be available and the Buick people will be given a chance to make good."

There is a shortage of houses now in Walden as the cutlery and other industries are getting back on their feet.

RECENT REAL ESTATE SALES IN SAUGERTIES.

Becker & Martin, real estate agents of Saugerties, have sold the two family house corner of East Bridge street and Theodore Place, Saugerties, to Adam Romer of Partition street, Saugerties.

Joseph Rinaldi of Bridge street, Saugerties, bought of Joseph Hackett the two story frame house, corner Bridge and Ripley street, Saugerties.

The property on Main street, Saugerties, owner by Mrs. C. C. James and occupied by Lewis Diel as a residence and George C. Lang as a barber shop, was sold to Jacob Jaffee, the Saugerties butcher.

HODEM DIES OF WOUND SUSTAINED IN ACCIDENT

After lying unconscious in a Weehawken, N. J., hospital for 36 hours, Charles Hodem of Middletown, N. Y., district manager of the Standard Oil Co., died at 7 o'clock Sunday morning from injuries received Friday evening when he was struck in the right eye by the sharp point of the shaft of a heavy horse-drawn truck as the automobile in which he was riding skidded. Mr. Hodem was the victim of a fractured skull and had he survived would have lost the vision of his right eye.

JURY AT GOSHEN AWARDS $4,000 FOR BROKEN LEG

Four thousand dollars was the valuation placed upon a broken leg by a Supreme court jury at Goshen, and Justice Joseph Morschauser, presiding, said the $6,000 asked was "very small."

The verdict was returned by a jury in the action brought by James Gulla, of Tuxedo Park, against James Clark, of New York city. Gulla's daughter, Grace, was struck by the automobile which Clark was driving.

"I Don't Sink So."

A little New York girl eight years old accompanied her mother to a studio exhibit where many rather languid ladies and gentlemen were viewing a poorly painted and rather questionable picture about which they were making polite but insincere remarks. Into the middle of the studio to a place in front of the special canvas little Laura strode; after a moment's look at the picture she turned around and in a high-pitched voice cried out:

"Zat's a very beotiful sing, but I don't sink so!"—Youth's Companion.

Bright Idea.

He was full of his trip on the Berengaria, the biggest ship in the world, and, talking to his best girl between the acts of the play, he said:

"Do you know, the Berengaria can steam twenty-four knots."

Taking another chocolate from the box that rested in her lap, she said, with a bright smile:

"I suppose they steam the knots so that the sailors can untie them more easily. Is that it, George?"

High quality and low cost make Good Luck a food of wide usefulness

Housewives value Jelke GOOD LUCK Margarine because of its many uses. High quality combined with low cost make it immensely practical for all 'round use.

The principal use for Jelke GOOD LUCK is on the table as a spread for bread. You may serve it with complete satisfaction, just as thousands of other housewives are doing. Its delicious flavor, uniform freshness and appetizing appearance make it a perfect spread.

Besides its use on the family table, GOOD LUCK is ideal for Cooking. There's not a recipe on the food page of the paper, in the domestic science class or in the cook book which calls for a shortening that can't better be made with GOOD LUCK. The low cost permits this general use most economically.

With GOOD LUCK in the ice box the housewife does away with the need for various shortenings, serves better meals and saves money. Buy Jelke GOOD LUCK today—FRESH, from your grocer.

Fatal Meal for Carpet Snake.

A curious story, which shows the persistence of the house-loving carpet snake in its search for food, is related in an Australia newspaper.

A Queenslander caught a rare species of variegated frog, which he put in a bottle of spirits for preservation. He kept the bottle at the head of his bunk and used the cork as a needler cushion.

One day the bottle was missing, and the owner's first thought was that it had been stolen by the blacks, but careful search revealed a dead carpet snake about seven feet long, with the bottled frog clearly showing in outline against the folds of its body.

A leakage from the cork had probably excited the appetite of the snake, and either the bottle or the needles had been responsible for its death.

Fingers Made Musical.

Musicians need long and supple fingers. Those whose fingers are short, and who have musical ambitions may be interested to know that a European has invented a machine that will make musical fingers. The hand is inserted in the machine and pressure is applied in such a way as to stretch the bone and flex the joints, without pain or injury, so the inventor says.

GIFFORD IS LEADING SCORER

In Hudson Valley School Basketball —His Team Also Leads—Was One of Best Seasons.

The close of the Hudson Valley Interscholastic basketball season finds Gifford of Poughkeepsie leading the league in scoring and Poughkeepsie High School leading the league both in point of games won, points scored against opponents, and points scored by opponents. Poughkeepsie, succeeded in scoring 70 more points than their opponents, Newburgh 20 more than their opponents, Kingston 3 more than their opponents, while the opponents of Saugerties scored 99 more points than did Saugerties.

The majority of the games this year have been won or lost by close scores and it has been one of the best basketball seasons that the Valley league has experienced in some time.

INSPECTS GREENE COUNTY SCHOOLS FROM AIRPLANE.

The bulletin issued by the University of the State of New York states that it is very possible that Greene county is the only county in the state having a school superintendent who has seen all the schools under his jurisdiction from the air. District Superintendent Robert M. Mac Naught of Windham, who made an airplane trip, says that the beauty of the Catskills, seen from an altitude of 3,000 to 5,000 feet, with lakes, streams and mountain peaks, is inspiring, and in his opinion can not be surpassed in any section of the eastern states; besides, the experience is decidedly thrilling.

Society Notes

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Harry Flowers at 530 Delaware avenue in honor of his birthday on Saturday evening. The main features of the evening were songs and selections by Raymond Cashin and David Harris. Piano selections were rendered by Miss Gertrude Egbertson. Cards and games were played. The winners were Bob Rhinehart and Charles Nestell. At 11:30 very dainty refreshments were served. Those present were: Mrs. John Purvis, Mrs. Kate Tremper, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd, Mr. and Mrs. William Koeppen and daughter, Helen, Mrs. Louis Egbertson and daughter, Gertrude, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nestell, Mrs. Marvin Whitaker and two children, Charles and Gladys, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rhinehart, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Flowers and son, Harry, Mrs. Alice Flowers, son and daughter, Theodore and Gladys, Mrs. David Harris and sons, David and Clifford, Mrs. Harry Paulis, Raymond Cashin and Edward Freer The guests departed in the wee small hours wishing Mr. Flowers many more happy birthdays.

Their 15th Anniversary.

Monday evening a large number of relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Streeter, No. 226 Smith avenue, to help them celebrate their fifteenth wedding anniversary. During the evening games and music were enjoyed and later refreshments were served. A wedding cake with fifteen candles occupied the place of honor in the center of the dining room table. At an early hour this morning the party broke up wishing Mr. and Mrs. Streeter many more happy anniversaries. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. John Purvis, Mr. and Mrs. John Robins, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Legg, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lantry, Mr. and Mrs. George Ryer, Mr. and Mrs. Edsil Flowers, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Otto, the Misses Elsie and Florence Shipman, George Hall, Miss Bertha Hall, Mrs J. Barringer, E Kellerman, Raymond Otto, Lewis Burhans, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L Streeter, Master Burton Streeter and the host and hostess.

Sorosis.

On Monday afternoon Sorosis members enjoyed a delightful social afternoon at the home of Mrs. Grover Lasher on Lucas avenue The program for the afternoon was a "valentine" party, but the celebration seemed also to include that of the birthday of the "Father of his Country." The house was artistically and very prettily decorated with red hearts and other appropriate decorations, while the tables were particularly picturesque. First the guests enjoyed a local "trolley party," a guessing game invented by one of the club members. It proved very clever and amusing and Miss Dorothy Leighton won the prize. Then five hundred was played. After the games very delicious and elaborate refreshments were served The afternoon's program, including the repast, were in charge of the following committee, which was profusely complimented upon the success of the affair. Mrs. Grover Lasher, chairman; Mrs. Niles, Mrs. Church and Mrs. Haines. Next week Sorosis will meet with Mrs. Drake.

ICE JAMS CAUSE FLOOD ALONG ST. LAWRENCE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Feb. 20—Three and one half feet of water cover the railroad tracks at Waddington, and passengers are compelled to walk one mile through fields in order to board southbound trains.

The flooded conditions are due to the huge ice jams in the St. Lawrence river near Morrisburg, Ont., directly across the international line from Waddington.

TRAINMEN'S PRESIDENT ADDRESSES OFFICIALS

Advocates "Family Negotiations" and No Labor Board.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—An appeal for a return to the "family negotiations" between the railroads and their employes, was made by William G. Lee, president of the brotherhood of railroad trainmen. Lee addressed the Western Railway Club—an organization composed chiefly of railroad operating officials—last night.

Lee advocated the abolishment of the United States Railroad Labor Board. "Railroad employes," he said, "do not believe in enforced submission of their differences to any court."

He deplored the tendency toward government regulation of railroads and expressed disapproval of President Harding's suggestion that a new division of the interstate commerce commission be created to handle railway labor disputes.

NEW YORK GARMENT STRIKE END IS NEAR

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Feb. 20.—The end of the garment strike in this city, affecting 30,000 workers, appeared to be in sight today as both strike leaders and employers' representatives prepared to go into conference to discuss settlement terms. They declared the strike would probably end tonight.

To Seal Tomb Until Fall.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Luxor, Egypt, Feb. 20.—Tons of limestone will be dumped over the 3,000-year-old tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, in the Valley of the Kings, when it is re-sealed next week until next autumn with the ancient pharoah's mummy undisturbed within, it was announced by the chiefs of the exploration party today.

St. Peter's at East Kingston.

The St. Peter's Basketball Club will invade East Kingston tonight in an effort to score a win over the newly organized East Kingston team. Game at 8:30.

ROUND WORLD IN 60 DAYS PLAN OF BRITISH FLYER

Man With Many Sensational Trips to Credit Hopes to Start in the Spring.

Alan J. Cobham, one of the crack airmen of Great Britain, is going to try the great adventure of flying around the world.

He hopes to leave England about March 24 and the detailed plans for the flight are now being carefully organized. Cobham is employed by the De Haviland company and will fly a DH-9, with a 240-horsepower Siddeley-Puma engine. With him will go Lieut. Commander Mackenzie Grieve, as navigator, who was with Hawker in the latter's attempted transatlantic flight.

The pair of them will go across central Europe to Constantinople, then to Bagdad, India, China, Japan, up to the Aleutian islands and across to Vancouver and Newfoundland.

Short Brothers, the seaplane builders, are making floats for the trip, which they will pick up first at Shanghai and then at Vancouver and Toronto.

"If any airman can accomplish the job Cobham is the man to do it," said C. G. Grey, editor of the Aeroplane. "He will leave nothing to chance. I think the prospects of his doing the flight in two months are good. It will naturally be spectacular, especially the last stage from St John's across the Atlantic, but Cobham will take as little risk as possible by going via the Azores."

Cobham has made a number of long sensational flights to and from the continent in the last couple of years on jobs of rushing news pictures of big events to newspapers and has also figured prominently in the annual English Air Derby.

CALF HAS 3 HEADS AND 6 LEGS

Freak Specimen on Wisconsin Farm Draws Visitors for Miles.

A freak calf, with three heads and six legs, one of which had three distinct hoofs, was born on the farm of Bert Baptist, a farmer living near the town of Nasewaupee, three miles south of Sturgeon Bay, Wis. One of the heads was between the forelegs and another on the right side of the shoulder.

Although the unique specimen lived only a few hours, it was viewed by farmers for miles around, who declared it to be one of the greatest freaks this section has produced.

ASSEMBLY ADOPTS MODIFICATION PLEA.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Feb. 20.—By a vote of 77 to 64, the Walker-Donohue resolution, memorializing congress to modify the Volstead law to permit the sale of beer and light wine, was adopted in the assembly this afternoon. Fourteen Republicans voted for the resolution.

Hebrew Weights and Measures.

According to a table of Hebrew weights and measures, given in Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, the cubit was a measure of length and was equal to 19.0515 inches of our measure or approximately 1 foot 7 inches. The reed for measuring buildings was equal to 6 cubits, that is, to 114.3 inches. However, the dictionary states that the values given in the table are to be accepted with reservation for want of greater certainty.

FARM LIVE STOCK

SUCCESS IN WEANING COLTS

Important That Young Animals Become Accustomed to Various Feeds of Mother.

On my farm from three to six colts are raised every year, and I never attempt to wean them until they are at least five months old. I prefer more to less age. The three-month-old colt will live, of course, when weaned at that age and properly cared for; but when five months have passed by the operation is performed with less danger and worry to both the colt and its mother. It is the most convenient age to bring about the separation. I always prepare my colts for the critical time of weaning by getting them acquainted with feeds that will be proper when the mother is taken away.

In vogue there are two methods of weaning where the separation may be either sudden or prolonged. In the latter case the mother is brought back three times daily and the colt allowed to nurse. This operation is soon lessened to twice daily and then to once a day, which soon culminates in complete separation. When the weaning is done suddenly it is very important to milk the mare by hand as often as required.

During the time of weaning the colt should be confined in a comfortable, roomy box stall, containing no manger or boxes with which the youngster may become entangled. Low walls are particularly dangerous, as the colt may rear up and in an attempt to get over become caught in some way and injure itself. When a few days have passed a run outdoors at night in a high-fenced yard will be helpful.

Sudden changes of diet are detrimental to any class of live stock, and no less so for the colt. All colts ought to be taught to eat bran, chop and hay, and these habits will come naturally if they are running with grain-fed mother, for a colt is nibbling at its mother's feed long before weaning time arrives.

Finely chopped oats are good and should make up a large portion of the ration. The oats are better if steamed. At first bran should be fed two or three times a week. One or two carrots a day will also afford the colt something to nibble at and be beneficial. Along with this the youngster should be given all the well-cured clover hay it will eat, and for this purpose second-growth clover is good if not improperly cured. Good results can be obtained by feeding cow's milk to the colt, starting with two or three quarts per day, and increasing slightly after the first week, taking care never to overfeed. This article of diet is not usually available for the feeding of colts, however, and does not often figure in the ration.

MAKING PROFIT FROM SHEEP

Farmers Feeding Alfalfa Hay and Paying Attention to Lamb Crop Make Most Money.

It is what goes into the sheep's stomach that determines how the owner will close his books at the end of the year. During the past year 27 owners of fine wooled flocks kept strict accounts of their herds. From these accounts it was shown that farmers feeding a limited amount of good alfalfa hay and giving attention to the lamb crop, received profits, even with wool and mutton prices at the level they have been this past year.

The five farms where wool was produced most economically showed an average cost of 19.4 cents per pound. The remaining 22 farms required 37.5 cents to produce each pound. The best farms raised 41 lambs per 100 head of sheep, while the flocks that lost money raised an average of 80 lambs per 100 sheep. These records were taken in Morgan and Noble counties, Ohio.

Ration for Stallion.

A young stallion should have a ration that will stimulate bone and muscle development. Whole oats is the best grain to use, but the feed can be cheapened by letting corn form a third of the ration. Many horsemen like to feed bran.

Time When Feed Counts.

A thrifty sow is able to feed a good-sized litter of pigs in fine shape during the first few weeks of their life, but this is just the time when it is very necessary that they be fed well.

SOUTHERN RHODESIA

Victoria Falls, Rhodesia.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Southern Rhodesia has become the "African Newfoundland," politically, by the recent vote of its people not to enter the Union of South Africa but to become instead a separate unit in the British empire. Adjoining the Union on the north, the region had come to be considered in this country as having something like the status of our one-time territories; and it was thought to be a foregone conclusion that just as the United States, a generation or so ago, reached out to the west and made its territories into states, the Union of South Africa would reach northward and incorporate its frontier regions. Technically, the Union has no definite claim on the British colonies, protectorates and regions more or less under British control that lie to the north; but it has boasted that it is "heir to all South Africa" and even though Southern Rhodesia stays out, it is not improbable that other regions in the neighborhood may join in the future.

Rhodesia is in many ways in a condition of development comparable to that of some of the western prairie states when they entered our Union. Only trunk-line railroads have been constructed, for the most part: the close network of the well-developed country is yet to come. Highways, too, are still few and poor. Both production and markets are largely undeveloped, and the farmers and ranchmen necessarily live the somewhat hard and primitive lives of the frontier. In recent years, however, Victoria (capital of Southern Rhodesia), Bulawayo, Salisbury and other towns have developed into modern municipalities with all the conveniences of the western world.

Still other similarities between Southern Rhodesia and some portions of the United States lie in physical conditions and climate. The country is a plateau region dry and hot during the southern summer, but with a reasonable rainfall, usually during other portions of the year. But at times it has its severe droughts.

Owned by a Corporation.

In one way Southern Rhodesia is without parallel in the United States, for nothing approaching ownership of an empire by a commercial corporation has ever come up in our history. In fact, in the extent to which such control has gone, Southern Rhodesia, together with Northern Rhodesia and adjacent territories, stands alone even in British experience, which contains the stirring history of the East India company's exploits in India.

The region, nearly half a million square miles in extent, became, through concessions from a native chief, a royal charter from the British crown, and conquest, virtually the private property of the British South Africa company, of which Cecil Rhodes was the moving spirit. The company, as might be expected of any developmental enterprise, sold land, leased mineral rights, and built railroads and other engineering works. But besides all this it actually governed the country, though in late years the imperial government has assumed some measure of control over the company's governmental activities.

Now a mining, ranching and agricultural country, Southern Rhodesia may also have a future as a manufacturing region. On its northern border flows the Zambesi river with its Victoria Falls of great volume, more than twice the height of Niagara, promising abundant power. Not far from the falls are extensive coal fields.

Its People and Topography.

The natives of Southern Rhodesia, numbering some 800,000, are in the anomalous position of having no official political status. They have drifted, or like Topsy, have "just growed," into their present condition. They have never been formally made British subjects, though British control has been extended over the country. They might almost be considered subjects of the British South Africa company. The company has all along laid claim to ownership of the lands on which the natives live except the areas recently set apart as reservations The white population of the country numbers about 30,000.

Though at present separate governmentally, the two Rhodesias demand consideration together. They represent together the field of activities of Cecil Rhodes' South Africa company and have considered uniting, though for the present at least the idea has been given up. The two Rhodesias make up a region shaped like a butterfly. Southern Rhodesia forms the left wing, while Northern Rhodesia forms both the right wing and the tail, the latter stretching up to the region of Africa's Great Lakes.

Both regions lie wholly within the tropics, but Northern Rhodesia extends farther into the theoretical hot country. Owing to its high altitude, however, its temperature is not so high as might be expected.

While Southern Rhodesia has a white population of about 35,000 and a native population of something over 750,000, Northern Rhodesia has less than 4,000 whites and nearly a million blacks. It is still the happy hunting ground for the human geographer, where he may study the effects of a plateau region upon remote tribes that have been little affected by the encroachments of the white man.

The illusion that all savage peoples do pretty much as they please is dispelled upon a cursory examination of a legal system that has penalties of mutilation for minor offenses, whose judges must fold their hands in a certain way when they try cases, and where every native male inevitably becomes something of a lawyer, since the daily public trials furnish the principal village divertissements.

Customs of the Natives.

The quips at woman's extravagance in dress, and the variability of modes, which often provide the inevitable topical song at American musical shows, find their prototypes in the minstrelsy of a Wemba swain whose metrical plaint is, "O woman, you are Like a greedy wagtail, pecking up all you can get." But a "mother-in-law" joke in this tribe would result disastrously for its perpetrator. So great is the reverence shown this relative that a husband must step aside out of the path if he meets her abroad. Should he come upon her unawares he must bow his head, cast his eyes upon the ground, and not dare look at her. Nor may he address her at all until after his first child is born.

Women anoint their bodies with castor oil, they whiten their faces with chalk at new-moon time, but the variety of ways they dress their hair also is a subject for native humor Deformation of their teeth forms another adornment; but the practice which their husbands complain about is their penchant for acquiring rings and bracelets. The latter range from bands of copper to spirals of metal that reach from wrist to elbow, and similar devices used as anklets.

With the ever-increasing overflow of civilized peoples, Northern Rhodesia soon may be pre-empted by colonists. Indeed, the movement of natives to reserves may indicate that such an inflow already is taking place. Though it lies across the equator, the Rhodesian plateau is adapted to the white man by reason of a climate that has no extremes. Moreover, its boom cities of Bulawayo and Salisbury possess hotels, clubs, business houses and apartments, built in the flush of hope that it would be a second Rand.

Much of Northern Rhodesia is suitable for farming; there are vast tracts of grazing land. Maize and tobacco are at present principal crops. Wheat, cotton and citrus fruits may be grown successfully. The timber awaits transportation facilities. Gold, copper, zinc and lead mines already are worked.

Use FREEMAN advertising regularly and conservatively and results will surely follow.

Coal Crisis in Newburgh.

The coal situation in Newburgh at present is the worst of the winter. Though previously there have been periods of shortage, nothing approaching the genuine distress of the present has been experienced here. Only the initiative of the ...l administration prevented great hardship in the city yesterday. Danger of this was relieved by the action of the administration in taking a car of coal, unloading it on Sunday, and distributing it in small lots. From the city stations 500 bags of coal of 100 pounds each were distributed among those who had no other supply.—Newburgh News.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

The stock market opened irregular today with most of the active issues however showing gains. New Haven advanced over one point to 21⅛ and Illinois Central rose nearly 1 point to 115⅝. Royal Dutch yielded over 1 point, while the other oil shares were fractionally higher. Studebaker moved up ⅝ and American Bosch Magneto rose nearly a point. U. S. Steel was unchanged.

American Woolen was a feature in the early trading, that stock selling up to nearly 104, but later yielding to 102⅝. The rails were prominent.

Specialties continued to demand most attention in the afternoon trading and made vigorous advances.

The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company is the largest manufacturer of rubber tires in the world, producing at present approximately 20% of the total automobile tires manufactured in this country; as well as an extensive line of mechanical and other rubber goods.

ASSETS PER SHARE

The Company's balance sheet as of December 31, 1922, adjusted to give effect to certain subsequent capital changes, as certified by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Company shows net current assets of $47,766,830 or $238 per share of Prior Preference Stock, including the shares under contract of purchase by the Company on or before February 1, 1924.

Net tangible assets for the Prior Preference Stock are shown to be $75,297,597, or $376 per share.

EARNINGS

For the four fiscal years ended October 31, 1919, during which period there was no funded debt, net income after all charges and available for interest and dividends, as certified by Messrs. Price, Waterhouse & Company, averaged $11,493,793 per annum. Deducting annual charges on present funded debt leaves $6,229,124 which would have been available for dividends on Prior Preference Stock had the present capitalization then been in existence.

During the sixteen months from October 31, 1919 to February 28, 1921, there occurred the extraordinary trade depression which precipitated the Company's reorganization. The losses sustained were subsequently absorbed through adjustments of capitalization at time of reorganization.

For the ten months from February 28, 1921, to December 31, 1921, income after interest, taxes, extraordinary adjustments and all other charges, and applicable to dividends on Prior Preference Stock, was $3,620,043, while for the fiscal year ended December 31, 1922, such income was $3,551,182. For the last three months of 1922 income available for dividends on the Prior Preference Stock was at the rate of $6,000,000 per annum. Annual requirements are $1,600,000 for dividends on the stock outstanding, including the $5,000,000, par value, under contract of purchase by the Company.

Both First Mortgage Bonds and Debenture Bonds are retireable respectively by semi-annual and annual sinking funds, as more fully described in the President's letter, which through their operations materially reduce interest charges ahead of the Prior Preference Stock and increase its equity.

*Includes $2,500,000 par value acquired by the Company in anticipation of Sinking Fund retirement.
Includes $5,000,000 par value under contract to the Company for purchase and retirement. Entire outstanding amount in a Voting Trust expiring May 1, 1941 or earlier at option of Voting Trustees.

OUTLOOK

During the last two years the rubber industry has labored under frequent reductions of the selling prices of its products imposed by the continued downward trend of the market prices of the principal raw materials. In the face of this the Company was obliged to use and pay for high priced materials purchased in 1920. These materials have now been taken in and consumed and the Company is again operating with inventories the average cost of which is at or under current market.

With better selling prices now prevalent, and sales volume steadily increasing, the Company's outlook for a profitable business is excellent.

at $98 per share (flat)

PURE AIR MOST IMPORTANT

Human System Needs It, and Plenty of It, Either in Waking or Sleeping State.

One of the most important parts of the human body is that thin, sheet-like structure known as the mucous membrane, which lines the nose, mouth, throat, bronchial tubes, and lungs. It is this membrane that is shouldered with the important work of guarding the system against millions of deadly enemies which assail it every day. A multitude of disease germs are breathed into our bodies each hour. The mucous membrane secrets a fluid which destroys these germs by simply eating them up, or by digesting them by a dissolving process. Of course, not all of the germs that enter the body with the air we breathe settle on the linings of our respiratory organs. The fact is that the air passages through the nose and throat do not trap all the solid impurities.

In ordinary breathing, the expired air contains about 70 per cent of the suspended impurities which enter during respiration. This means that nearly one-third of the solid matter in the air we breathe remains in the human body. Some of the floating germs that enter our noses and mouths have a good opportunity to attack us from within if our protecting mucous membrane is overworked or abused and fails to function effectively.

It is for this reason that we must commence immediately to safeguard the purity of our air, just as we safeguard our food and water. The average person breathes 32 pounds of air a day, while during the same length of time he only takes six pounds of food and water into his body. In other words, the average individual literally consumes five times as much air as he does solid and liquid nourishment. In view of such a fact, it does not seem to be consistent that we pay so much more attention to the quality of what we eat and drink than to the vital and sustaining air we breathe.

Lo, the Poor Indian!

Mr. Whittemore of Washburn college was struck by the metropolitan education of an Indian he met at the Taos (N. M.) art colony.

While waiting for his wife and daughter outside of a studio, Doctor Whittemore relates, "a big fat, rather old Indian approached me. He was wrapped in a white sheet, which fell in stately folds from his shoulders to the ground. His arms were folded like those of the officer of the day standing at parade rest during a formal guard mount. His approach was as dignified as that of a Roman senator.

"I looked at him in recognition of his stately bearing, and he spoke to me these full and measured words: 'Sir,' he said, 'I am broke. Will you give me a dime?'"—Boston Transcript.

"Marriage used to mean cleaving to each other. Cleaving, sir. Now, it's just a trick to make sure that there shall be at any rate two persons in the world who will never meet again."

"Man is an inexperienced motorist in the Alps and women are his hairpin turns."

"After you have been married five years, there should always be someone to dinner."

"Compromise is the breath of married life; and it is almost more important for a man to learn what his wife deprecates than what she applauds. The temperature of the hot water into which he is predestined periodically to plunge will be lower if he fails to share her antipathies."—E. V. Lucas.

"Is it doing him any good?"

DIFFERENT KIND OF CAPTAIN

That Particular Police Official Was the Incarcerator, Not Liberator, of Suspected Persons.

The letters O. R. following a name on the slate at the city prison mean that the person named has been released from jail on his own recognizance, or without being required to give bond. Naturally, the first thought of an attorney representing a prisoner is to obtain the release of his client on his O. R.

Several days ago a lawyer walked into the office of Edward Shubert, captain of police, at headquarters and made an eloquent plea for the release on his own recognizance of a craps shooter. His plea fell on deaf ears.

"Say, look here, you've got the wrong captain," Shubert said. "There's the let 'em pass out captain over there. I'm the put 'em in captain." The lawyer left the office, shaking his head.—Indianapolis News.

Immense Wooden Bowl.

The automobile speedway recently completed at Kansas City is built entirely of southern pine lumber and timber. It cost about $500,000 and it took 900 men 67 working days to shape 4,400,000 board feet of lumber into the great wooden bowl which is said to be the fastest automobile race track in the world. It required 175 cars to transport the lumber, chiefly from Louisiana and Mississippi—and if laid end to end the pieces would extend for a thousand miles. The track is 90 feet wide and with a 40-foot safety zone on the inside. The wearing surface is made up of two by three inch planks laid on edge, and the entire structure is above the ground, the foundation being of timber. At the turns the track is banked at an angle ranging from 7 to 42 degrees and to a height of 26 feet at the sharpest point. Thanks to the banking, an average speed of 120 miles an hour may be obtained without danger, providing the driver can keep up 80 miles an hour in order to stick on the steep turns.

Pity Akin to Love.

It all happened on account of a robin. It was Sunday afternoon—he was taking me home from a big day at an amusement park. Just a few steps before reaching home I saw on the sidewalk a poor robin with an injured leg. I knelt down to help it, passing some remark about its mate. Then I expressed my sorrow for it.

George asked me if I really felt sorry for anything alone like that. I told him I did. He said I should feel more sorry for him, as he was getting old and didn't have a mate.

"Well," I suggested, "why don't you hunt for one?"

"I don't have to hunt. I've found her already," he smiled.—Chicago Tribune.

Due for Disappointment.

"Well, I'll tell you, Gap," said Zeke Lopp, "I aim to sell off some of my stuff, pack the rest of it and the old woman and children into the waggin, whistle to the dogs, and start for Oklahomy."

"All right," replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "But 'pears like I've heered, from two, three fellers that have been there, that the ravens hain't running no free boarding house in Oklahomy this year."—Kansas City Star.

And There Are Many Such.

A man appeared at the children's home to adopt a boy. Among the children playing in the yard was a boy who had just arrived. He was ragged and dirty.

The man decided to take him and said: "Son, go get ready now and we shall soon be off."

"Mister," said the boy seriously, "I—I ain't got nothing to get ready with."—Exchange.

For Forgetful Correspondents.

Australia is experimenting with a system whereby radio messages are sent to mail steamers that have left port, on which they are written and mailed as letters at any port of call.

Beef Perfectly Preserved.

Experiments by British scientists have developed a way to freeze beef so as to preserve completely the physical and chemical properties of the fresh meat.

FIND VAST COAL DEPOSITS

Russians in Northern Siberia Report 10,000 Square Versts.

The Russian trade delegation made it known that the Russian mining survey expedition to Northern Siberia has returned home after an eighteen months' investigation, reporting it had located huge coal deposits to the extent of about 10,000 square versts. (A verst is about two-thirds of a mile). Members of the expedition declared they had found it possible to work the mines under polar conditions.

In the Yenisei region they said that graphite seams were found fifteen metres in diameter at no great depth.

BATHROOM IN M. P.'S OFFICE

Maj. David Davies Starts His Day's Work in Tub.

Maj. David Davies, M. P., probably is the only man in Great Britain, if not in the world, who has a telephone in his bathroom.

A multi-millionaire, he has the reputation of being a "sixteen-hour a day" worker. While the average man is splashing around in his tub in the morning, Major Davies in his bath has begun his day's work.

One of his three private secretaries has arrived with the morning's correspondence and the major dictates letters and makes telephone appointments during the process of ablution.

Reckless Driver Carried Dynamite.

H. J. Powers, excavation contractor of Los Angeles, Cal., had several cases of dynamite in his automobile, officers said, when arrested at Santa Monica, Cal., for driving his car 37 miles an hour, for having no tail lights, and because his brakes were so poor that he could not stop within 200 feet.

How Clever.

"Did you," said the clever young man, "note that bit of news in the paper about an Albert Ross having a baby born with claws instead of feet?"

"No," replied the audience; "how remarkable!"

"Hardly remarkable," said the clever young man, making ready for a hasty retreat. "It might be called remarkable had the baby albatross had feet instead of claws."

Computation of Centuries.

A century is a period of one hundred years. This is the most common signification of the word, and as we begin our computation of time from the incarnation of Christ, the word generally is applied to some term of one hundred years subsequent to that event, as the first century A. D.

BRITAIN'S HANDS OFF IN RUHR

Lloyd-George's Plea for Anglo-American Intervention Rejected—France Would Regard It as Unfriendly Act.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Feb. 20.—Convinced that no amount of persuasion can induce the United States to intervene in the Ruhr, the British government today took up once again its policy of "watchful waiting."

Officials declared that the eloquent plea of former Premier David Lloyd George in the house of commons in support of Anglo-American mediation, would have no immediate effect upon the government's policy. Great Britain, these officials said, would not make any move toward interference, nor would she invite American cooperation unless there is a marked change in conditions in central Europe.

Two circumstances were pointed out to emphasize the government's stand for non-intervention:

First—Premier A. Bonar Law's statement that France would regard intervention as a hostile act.

Second—The size of the government's majority (more than 100 votes) in turning down the resolution of the liberal party for Anglo-American mediation.

As a result of the warning of France against British interference, Premier Bonar Law is understood to be anxious for the United States to take the first step if a time comes when intervention is deemed advisable.

France and Belgium are going ahead with their plans for complete subjugation of the entire coal and industrial area of western Prussia. That they wish no outside interference at this time, is evident. The Tory newspaper Morning Post, commenting upon this phase of the situation, said:

"If the United States and Great Britain were to unite to force intervention upon France, it would not only end the Anglo-French entente but would range Britain and America definitely on the side of Germany."

Richard Barthelmess in "The Bond Boy," the super-special attraction at Keeney's theatre until Wednesday, presents the screen version from George W. Ogden's story. This production has the Virginian hills locale, the people for characters, the old practice of bonding out children to masters until they reach twenty-one for theme. The comedy feature is Al St John in "The Alarm." Starting Thursday Constance Talmadge in "East is West."

The double feature bill at the Opera House is William Russell in "Man's Size," an action story of the outdoors, also. The Blue Mountain Mystery, a detective drama. Wednesday and Thursday Charles "Buck" Jones in "Trooper O'Neil," also Rex Beach's "Fair Lady" adapted from his famous story "The Net."

A new chapter play starring William Desmond is programmed at the Auditorium tonight entitled "Around the World in 18 Days" and the feature attraction is "Ashamed of His Parents." Wednesday House Peters in "The Man from Lost River" a he man story of the Northwest.

"To Have and To Hold" is now on view at the Orpheum Theater. Betty Compson and Bert Lytell have the featured roles, and there are rapier duels galore. Theodore Kosloff fights young Arthur Rankin (cousin of John, Lionel and Ethel Barrymore and nephew of John Drew;) Lytell and Kosloff fight aboard a man-of-war, aboard the pirate ship and later in the court of King James I. Thursday, Friday and Saturday an entire change of program with six great vaudeville acts.

HARD ON NERVES

Squeaky Shoes One of Mankind's Greatest Afflictions.

Only Way to Be "Dead Safe," It Would Seem, Is to Wear Pair of Rubber Boots.

The only way to be certain that you will not some day find yourself walking through some still and echoing church or hall in a pair of squeaky shoes is never to go anywhere except in a pair of rubber boots. There is no sure way to cure a pair of shoes of squeaking except one—by giving them away to the man who tends the furnace.

A shoemaker can take a pair of squeaky shoes apart and put them together again until he is blue in the face, but if that squeak isn't ready to go it won't go.

But you can give those shoes to the furnace man and he can sit down and put them on and rise and walk away and make no more noise than if he were walking in his socks.

Sometimes squeaky shoes are cured by other means than furnace men, but not often, and the process in that case is pretty wearing on the nerves, observes a writer for the New York Sun.

A man once bought a pair of $15 shoes. He said that he would try high-priced shoes for once in his life and see if they would last long enough to be worth it. He put them on one Sunday morning and went to church, and he was a little late and was forced to walk to his seat, through the comparative quiet of the minister's opening exhortation. And right at that point those shoes began to let out noises that were worse than a guinea hen going somewhere in a hurry, and the minister might as well have been talking on his hands for all the congregation could hear of what he had to say.

Next day that man returned his shoes to the place he bought them and told the shopkeeper what he thought about them, which was interesting. The shopkeeper sent them to the factory and had them fixed. Next Sunday the man again wore them to church, and again they were still as death up to the exact moment of his entering the church, when they took in a couple of deep breaths, as you might say, and began to yell like human beings in distress. This time the choir was singing the opening hymn, and those squawking shoes half-way drowned the singers out and threw a dozen of them out of key, and the leader had to stop the singing and start all over again.

And in the midst of such excitement as hadn't been seen in that church for forty years the owner of those shoes squeaked halfway down to his pew, turned around and squenked back out into the street again, and went to the house of the shoe salesman, and walked in without knocking, but did his knocking afterward, when the salesman came in from the kitchen to find out what was the matter.

The indignant customer walked across the room. He turned around and walked back again. Not a sound. Those shoes never made a squeak. They never made another squeak as long as he wore them, which was fourteen months and a half.

Indo-China.

Both Chinese and Malays in Indo-China had reached a high stage of civilization before the arrival of the French and have preserved language, literature and religion almost exactly as they existed before Khai Dink, emperor of Annam, astonished Europe by his education when he came to visit France last summer.

Commerce flourishes in Indo-China. Cotton and rice are exported in large quantities to China and Japan. Railways exist on an extensive scale. Saigon in Cochin-China has become one of the big ports of the French empire, boasting of docks, wharves, European buildings and first-class hotels. Lord Northcliffe, when he visited the city shortly before his death, was loud in his praise of the French administration.

British Electric Ships.

Three vessels of a very unusual character are shortly to be built in a British ship-building yard. Each will be about 4,000 tons and especially designed for the fruit-carrying trade. They will be fitted with oil engines of a special type designed in this particular yard and recently tested under ocean-going conditions with most satisfactory results. These engines will drive electric generators which will supply current to electric motors placed on short propeller shafts at the stern of the vessel. This arrangement will give greatly increased space for cargo and is expected to result in a considerable saving in fuel consumption, besides giving great flexibility of control.

American Samoa.

American Samoa, composed of the islands of Tuituila, Annun, Oju and Talu, is 4,160 miles from San Francisco, 2,263 miles from Hawaii, 1,580 miles from Auckland, and 4,200 miles from Manila. The natives can all read and write and are all Christians of different denominations. They are the highest type of the Polynesian race, and are greatly on the increase, due to laws forbidding foreigners buying their land.

The Nuisance in the Triangle.

A Georgia judge says the only safe "triangle" for a man to get mixed up with is a wife, a pipe and a dog. That's all right, and we tried it out once, but for the sake of peace we had to get rid of the dog.—Detroit Free Press.

ARRANGING FOR BENEDICTINE BALL

A very enjoyable special meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Benedictine Hospital was held at the home of Mrs. N. D. J. Murphy on Monday afternoon. The members are earnestly planning to make this Lenten work of arranging for the ball a success, and so realize a substantial amount for the benefit of the Benedictine Hospital on Easter Monday evening. Arrangements are perfected and chairmen selected as follows:

General chairman, Dr. Mary Gage Day.

Ticket Committee—Mrs. N. D. J. Murphy and Miss Mary McGill.

Music Committee—Mrs. Mark O'Meara.

Decorations Committee—Mrs. Frank L. Meagher.

Supper Committee—Mrs. Frank L. Eastman.

Flowers and Cigars—Miss Anne Heaney.

Lemonade Committee—Miss Elizabeth Brown, R. N. and Mrs. Mary O'Neil, R. N.

Floor Committee—Lieut. Colonel Frank L. Meagher.

Each chairman will select her own workers to be on the committee with her. The ladies were much gratified when a letter was read from the secretary of the Musicians' Union No. 215, stating that Balfe's and the Imperial orchestras would furnish the music. This promises the best of music for the occasion.

At the close of the business session Mrs. Murphy served afternoon tea and cakes and a very pleasant social time was enjoyed by all.

ICY STREETS CAUSE DELAY TO TROLLEY CARS

Car No. 44, of the Kingston Consolidated Railroad Company, has considerable difficulty in getting up and down Broadway on the 7 o'clock trip from Rondout this morning. As the car was drawing near the Armory an enclosed touring car suddenly found that it was impossible to get off the trolley track and as a result it had to be helped off by willing hands. On the down trip a horse, drawing a coal sleigh, slipped while coming out of Thomas street and fell over the car track breaking the shaft of the sleigh. Passengers on the trolley had to lift horse and sleigh off the track before the car could go on.

There was quite a number of working men on the car who were late to their work as a result of these delays.

Home and Porch Dresses

An Event That Sounds the First Note of Spring!

This is the ideal time to purchase your Spring supply of Washable Frocks for home and porch wear. This season the styles are charming beyond description. The colors radiate and sparkle with the brilliancy of Spring buds and blossoms and will win the admiration of all women who seek Frocks of rare loveliness and extraordinary economy.

See the Four Famous Features

By buttoning two tabs, concealed beneath a smart panel at the back of the dress, the size of the garment can be so altered to perfectly fit any and all types of figures.

Under-Arm-Shields are tailored into these Dresses and provide practically double service at these points, which, all women know are first to wear out on ordinary dresses.

If it becomes necessary to lengthen the skirt, due to tall figures or shrinkage, you need only pull a thread which releases a two-inch concealed tuck. No restitching necessary.

Every Barmon Dress is provided with two Menders of Dress Material which are fastened to the inner part of the garment. Torn or worn places are quickly and neatly repaired with these Menders.

THE MOST DIFFICULT FIGURES ARE PERFECTLY FITTED

All women of large, full-fashioned or unusual proportions, who have always experienced difficulty in being properly fitted—can be perfectly fitted—with Barmon Dresses due to a patented Size-Adjustment which is an exclusive Barmon feature—and which accomplishes this perfection of fit with slenderizing, complimentary effect.

THE MODERATE COSTS WILL AMAZE AND DELIGHT YOU

It is difficult to understand how such finely made garments—fashioned from the best of Percales, Madras, Chambrays and Ginghams—beautifully trimmed and decorated, can be offered at such trifling costs—and you will quickly follow the example of other women who buy their full Spring supply while this sale is in progress.

All sizes from 16 to 18 and 36 to 56 are included in this sale—in many Smart models—and phone or mail orders will be promptly filled.

Barmon Dresses are made in unusually delightful styles of fine grade materials in the newest and most charming stripes, plaids, etc. One new style just received is of fine gingham and unbleached muslin with applique trimming which is very pretty. Regular sizes are priced at

HEPINSTAL PLACES TEAM ON MARKET

Poor Attendance Causes Albany Manager To Offer To Dispose of Franchise—Utica or Gloversville May Take Club.

The Albany franchise of the New York State Basketball league is on the market.

Unless Albany men come forward and buy the franchise, Albany has seen its last professional game this season.

Utica and Gloversville business men are ready to take over the franchise and operate the club in their cities.

This information was given out by Manager William Hepinstall to the press last night.

Manager Hepinstall also definitely announced that he would not stage another game at the Albany armory this season.

The Albany owner said the decision to dispose of the franchise was necessitated by the poor attendance at the state league games in Albany this season. The team, he added, was one of the highest salaried ones in the New York State league and, although it has been in first place and fighting for first place for the greater part of the second half of the season, the receipts of the games did not meet expenses. Then, too, he explained, four Saturday nights have been lost because the armory was engaged for other purposes.

Albany fans, who have been loyal to the basketball management attribute the falling off in attendance to insufficient heat in the armory on the nights some of the games were played.

The Senators are now only a half game behind the league leading Kingston club. In view of the fact that no games can be played in the armory for two weeks, it is possible no one will come forward with an offer for the Albany team and that the franchise will go to Utica or Gloversville for the rest of the season.

Thought for the Day.
